EDIBLES, VAPE PENS, CONCENTRATES For Medical Marijuana Card Holders Only

When recreational marijuana sales officially started on October 1, many medical marijuana patients expressed concerns that there would be new competition for the medicine they've come to rely on.

For many patients the higher potency vape pens, edibles, and concentrates have been the most effective cannabis remedy.

The good news is that these medical products are still exclusively reserved for OMMP card holders, with no competition from recreational buyers.

To see if you qualify for your medical marijuana card, contact us today, or drop by our new location on the corner of 11th & Chambers at 1675 W. 11th #B in Eugene.

RECLAIM OUR SCHOOLS

Parents, teachers, students, citizens of Oregon, please speak up in defense of public education. Our schools need small classes with innovative teachers who have the freedom to create authentic assessments to thrive. What they don't need is one-size-fits-all, high-stakes standardized testing.

Supporters of corporate-driven high-stakes standardized testing claim that we need these standardized tests because we must address the achievement gap that exists between white students and students of color and also between higher income students and lower income students. How will they address it? They will use this "rigorous data" from high-stakes standardized tests to evaluate teacher and school performance based on student test scores.

For example, if a student gets extremely anxious before he takes the Smarter Balanced test and doesn't receive a high score, this test score will be used against his teacher. To assign all blame for low scores to teachers is simplistic and insulting to educators, parents and students. There are many reasons for student success, or lack of it. Additionally, these tests are only one, narrow measure of a student's capabilities.

Rather than spending billions of dollars on high-stakes standardized testing and large amounts of instruction time on these tests, we should trust our teachers to create authentic, performance-based assessments. We should also demand funding to reduce class sizes, so students can get more individualized attention that focuses on their needs and passions.

Please go to oregoncape.org for information on how to reclaim public education.

FRESH LOOK NEEDED

Thanks to the Weekly for your continued coverage of the rezoning issue in south Eugene. Edward Russo's often prescient summaries of the workings of the Eugene

City Council strangely missed the mark in the Oct. 27 Register-Guard.

Councilor Clark's strong motion that the SW-SAZ plan be remanded to planning staff to better protect existing residential neighborhoods was approved on Oct. 21. At that work session both City Manager Jon Ruiz and City Attorney Glenn Klein stated that Jan. 19 was too soon to "revise 80 pages of code."

So that Monday night the council merely extended the timeline to March 19 for staff to come back with a revised SW-SAZ for public hearing. The approved motion stayed approved. Russo should have known that being approved, it also remains "adopted."

Ruiz, planning staff and the involved neighborhoods now have a clear directive on their to-do list: The SW-SAZ needs to be revised according to the motion to better protect privacy, solar access, easements, etc. for existing residential neighborhoods.

The best route to accomplish that goal is not outreach to the public with the old plan — i.e. obfuscation and re-branding. The best route to accomplish that goal is to listen to the neighbors and businesses in the impacted areas through neighborhood organizations and a citizen planning team that can work with the city and take an actual fresh look through the previous "redevelopment centric" rezoning.

RELENTLESS NOISE

Leo Harris Parkway divides Autzen Stadium from Alton Baker Park and so divides Oregon Ducks from mallard ducks. But even when it's not game day, the sound volume from Autzen respects no boundary and invades Alton Baker, often drowning out the birdsong, riversong and windsong that people rightly expect to hear in the park. Long practice sessions at the stadium are generally accompanied by a soundtrack as booming as one might expect for a violent sport that lends itself to war metaphors.

Forgive and Be Forgiven

ATONING FOR THE EVILS OF AN INSANE WAR

It seems like only yesterday, and not 20 years ago. And I don't know why or how, but Lewis Puller's suicide "got" to me. But, what I wrote 20-plus years ago still stands: Another Vietnam vet has committed suicide. I do not know the particular demons which finally drove Lewis Puller to kill himself. I do know I have a few of my own that propelled me to the edge in 1975.

Vietnam must be the craziest war in history: more veterans — at least twice as many — have committed suicide after the war as died in the war. And that does not include single-car accidents or drug or alcohol overdoses. It is as if we Vietnam vets are being damned for our sins.

What are our "sins" that push us to act on what the Catholics call a mortal sin?

Lewis Puller Jr., son of the legendary Marine General Lewis "Chesty" Puller, was in a lot of pain because of his loss of both legs, his terrible addiction to drugs, perhaps mistakenly prescribed, and, worst of all, a failing marriage to a wife whose past support had been vital. In my own case, I felt guilt over having inadvertently walked our patrol into an ambush of "friendly fire." But I believe those may be superficial demons. Something more fundamental is going on.

I think that one of the biggest demons is what I will call justifiable guilt. Everyone likes to say, "That's war. It's not your fault." Yet other veterans of other wars have handled worse and not blown themselves away.

In her seminal book, Long Time Passing, Myra MacPherson noted the parallels between Vietnam veterans and German veterans of World War II, particularly the high rates of suicides in both groups. I believe she was on to something that we as veterans and Americans have missed or, worse, denied and repressed: the sin of participating in a bad war, and the very real need to atone for that sin as a psychologically healing act.

I am not speaking in terms of religious or spiritual mumbo-jumbo. No matter how noble our intentions, Vietnam was a very bad thing. There was an almost cosmic level of damage inflicted between two societies. Damage to them, damage to us; the statistics are so often recalled. But look at them again through the prism of humanity and dwell on the pain behind the sterile numbers.

Fifty-six thousand Americans were killed. More than 2,500 are missing. At least 1.4 million

Vietnamese were killed. Two million were wounded in a country with no medical facilities to care for them. Ten million were driven from their homes. Thirty million gallons of Agent Orange poisoned the soil of Vietnam and 14 million tons of explosives, not counting napalm and phosphorous, ripped the land apart.

In the south of Vietnam, the land of our supposed allies, 9,000 of 15,000 hamlets were uprooted or destroyed; more than 20 million acres of cultivable land were bombed, and the soil ruined by the resulting compaction of bomb impact craters. Over 10 million acres of forests were defoliated. The result was perhaps the most environmentally destructive war ever waged. America did all that. We did all that. And when we veterans juxtapose that waste with our suffering and that of our buddies, we face the chasm of madness and yes, evil.

How do we bridge that chasm? What good is to be found in a world so full of evil, especially if we see it in ourselves? I can't speak for Puller or anyone else but myself, and I hope it can help. I am not overly religious, but after my own near-suicide, I forced myself to believe that it is a mortal sin, if you will, and that self-imposed hang-up has clicked in as a useful device when I am hit with despair. It helps me to get past the immediate crisis.

I am not saying suicide is a mortal sin, or that I found the Lord, but I can assure fellow sufferers that help and comfort can be derived by behaving "as if it were so." And when the crisis passes, I usually find that life is worth going on after all. Then I can address the meaning of what happened and, more important, transcend it.

I was very lucky. I not only found a "trick" in coping with my despair, I've had a loving wife and family. As important, I was able to meet with and found a lot of forgiveness from those whom I victimized, the Vietnamese.

After all the spiritual talk, it also comes down to a sense of maturity in facing up to ones errors or "sins," and to realize — truly understand — that we can forgive and be forgiven; the victim and the victimizer can find atonement.

Lewis, may you find peace.

I encourage them to use all their senses to fully experience the park and the more-than-human world. that all us "flying people" rest up at the David Joyce Gallery at LCC until it's time to be placed back at the airport where we belong.

PROFITING FROM ILLNESS

What kind of country are we, that: 1) allows people and planet to be slowly poisoned for profit, 2) hales courses of treatment of expensive drugs and protocols that prolong suffering, 3) obscenely overcompensates the revolving-door triangle of "poisoners" (chemical and fossil fuel company execs), "healers" (medical, Big Pharma and insurers) and pick-your-disease-NGO's Race-for-the-Cure-type fundraisers?

We profiteer from illness, and build medical and business models with government dollars and "oversight" that impoverish our most vulnerable and destabilize our society. Those of us who are well and healthy need to take note: We won't always be well and healthy, and neither will our children. It's past time we join the rest of the industrialized nations and provide a unified, publicly funded health care system to our citizens.

When I see my friend, who's been a public school educator for more than 40 years, driven to what would be bankruptcy except for the generosity of her family, by a cancer diagnosis eight years ago, I have to believe the majority of us are ready to wake up! We must elect lawmakers who will get the job done in the Legislature. Colorado is going after it. Oregon can also win single-payer health care. We just have

A FLYING SLUG

I do declare, I've never — what is all this brouhaha about David Joyce's flying people? Well, it's just not fittin'! Having just recently flown in and out of Eugene's airport, how extra special it was to see my youthful 1980s persona "Dusty, the Feather Fairy" still hanging around. Let me tell y'all how I had the honor of being part of this art project. Now I don't want to brag, but I will.

With rain falling from the sky, fellow Radar Angel Shawn Fontaine and I flitted downtown with our fairy wings and magic wands. With high hopes, we struck a pose. Seems we made quite an impression as David even brought out an extra camera. We left the studio with spirits lifted and much gratitude for the experience and opportunity. Many months passed and, on one of my trips back from Nashville, my Eugene family came to pick me up.

Well, when I looked up, there we were, flying high! I was overwhelmed with excited pride. Oh, I felt over the moon. I felt immortalized, and being from the hospitable South, greeting travelers along their way seemed to be right up my alley, or in this case, right up my hallway. For all these many flying years, whether you were coming or going — there I was!

I sure do hope the magic continues and

THE TRUMPKIN COVER

I enjoyed your Donald Trump pumpkin cover Oct. 22. I'm not a Donald Trump fan, but if Bernie Sanders had the guts to talk at Liberty University in September, I wish Trump would come to the University of Oregon. I'd like to come down from Salem and see what kind of reception Eugene would give to a Trump visit.

ALLOWING OBJECTIFICATION

To follow-up and add to Ryan Foote's Oct. 22 letter on objectifying women, not only in the media but in society in general, I agree, yet play devil's and objectivity's advocate.

I have taken EW to task over objectification in the past, and yet, like most human endeavors, they are contradictory at best. The EW talks and advertises out both sides of its printed mouth, knowing damn well that sex sells, yet prints progressive rants when women's sex is abused. The real issue here is: If it's all right to objectify the gander, then why does the goose, who does the objectifying, not allow an equal gander of the goose?

Foote comments on the photo of Storm Large's nipples, yet they're not the true "points" of contention. They're beautiful, though! A picture's worth a thousand words, so what's EW's need for printing "titillates" other than to purposefully draw attention to them? Don't they do that well enough on their own? And what about the previous page's ad for Divas, which shows a woman "threatening" to perform fellatio on a microphone, both hands "cocked" at its base, ruby lips wide open, giving a mere impression that it's really about singing?

Let's be honest here: If women allow themselves to be portrayed this way by approving these photos and display ads, then let's have an open discussion. I live in a college town and see women objectifying themselves constantly, fishing for attention by wearing skimpy and suggestive clothes, then blame men for being devious about it.

Is there any irony in the fact that the word "deviate" immediately follows "deva" in the dictionary? In Jungian terms, they shadow each other.

So the question then remains: Who's objectifying whom?

CONSUMERISM BITES

High praise to David Hugh Tyson for his Oct. 22 letter "Consumer Culture." He notes that "investing in kids" can go very wrong, if what we're spending on is more consumerism. Kids are being trained from kindergarten to be technology consumers, and to get both their homework and their leisure from these (expensive and polluting) little gadgets.

Too often, liberal causes fall into the trap of advocating change by way of more consumerism. Stop global warming? Buy a Prius? Gotta be kidding — a new car costs the planet and its climate big damage. Cure cancer? Buy a bunch of synthetic pink T-shirts died with poisonous chemicals. (Ninety thousand industrial chemicals in the world are untested for human effects and more or less guarantee a rising tide of cancer.)

Small activist groups, staffed mostly by volunteers, may do more good than harm. But once they install an officer in charge of fundraising, the constant inhalation of money becomes the group's main goal. If you're taking money from the Rockefeller Foundation, you really can't knock "clean coal."

Recently, the Nuclear Information and Resource Service (which I respect, generally) sent out an earnest appeal for funds for advertising at the People's Climate March in New York. To save the environment, they proposed to buy 1,200 synthetic banners on plastic poles, saying "No Nukes." Never mind that they were probably produced partly by nuclear electricity. Those banners actually contributed to global warming in their production and have today become poisonous garbage.

Care about the world? Better that you really try (and it's not easy) to do nothing at all than add to our misery with more consumerist posturing. Humans don't need to get off their ass and do more. We need to do a lot less.

Major Impacts

SOUTH WILLAMETTE ZONING PLAN EXAMINED

The City Council deftly headed off a major confrontation with residents of the South Willamette area by voting Oct. 21 to not rezone single-family homes in the area. It was the council's first opportunity to provide guidance to city planners on the highly controversial South Willamette Special Area Zone.

The SW-SAZ has been pushed forward by the Planning Department under the auspices of a "community-driven" process. However, once residents started learning about the plan in June of this year, opposition swelled. As a pilot project, the SW-SAZ is intended to be replicated in many other parts of Eugene.

The 83-page SW-SAZ zoning amendment would increase potential density by changing the zoning on 469 properties, including 229 single-family homes. It was a bold and unprecedented move by the Planning Department, but there were a number of critical problems. First and foremost, the city had not adequately informed and engaged residents of the affected area. But, second, the plan lacked supporting information indicating what the impacts would be from such a major change to the area. No estimate was provided for the number of additional dwelling units the SW-SAZ would allow. And there was no information on impacts such as traffic, parking, housing affordability, schools, etc.

Thanks to neighborhood fundraising, it was possible to perform a basic impact analysis to estimate what these impacts would be. The results show that the SW-SAZ, as proposed, would have major consequences affecting much of south Eugene. The following summary of impacts reflects the difference between the maximum potential development allowed under the proposed SW-SAZ, and that allowed under existing zoning.

Added capacity: The SW-SAZ would allow 3,358

additional dwelling units with an associated population increase of 5,488 people in this small, 123-acre area — more people than the current populations of Veneta, Creswell or Oakridge.

Traffic: Add 2,140 vehicles to peak-hour traffic in south Eugene (5 to 6 pm) and increase rush-hour traffic on Willamette by 57 percent, causing the failure of the intersection at 29th Avenue and Willamette Street. The SW-SAZ would impact virtually all residents of south Eugene by generating intense traffic congestion on Willamette Street that would spill over onto alternate routes, including neighborhood streets.

Parking: An estimated 4,390 additional parking spaces would be needed to accommodate potential residential development. Due to the decreased parking requirements for development in the SW-SAZ (from 1.5 to 0.5 parking spaces per three-bedroom apartment), about half of the added parking demand would be met on neighborhood streets, consuming all on-street parking for several blocks.

School capacity: An estimated 960 additional school-age children would be added to the area. This would necessitate the addition of at least one new elementary school and expanded middle school and high school capacities.

Housing affordability: The area was found to have some of the most diverse and affordable housing in the city, with housing priced $42,000 lower than the median for the city as a whole. A city analysis shows that redevelopment under the SW-SAZ will require higher rents to be profitable, and developers may build to the higher end of the market, resulting in a likely loss of affordability.

Based on these results, it's clear that residents of the area have good reasons to be concerned about how the SW-SAZ might affect them. While the study focused on the major impact categories, residents have noted many other potential impacts, including blocked views of Spencer Butte, lost solar access, property values, potential displacement of small businesses, environmental impacts and fiscal impacts to the city.

It is important to note that there is no mitigation proposed by the city for any of these impacts. There are no street improvements, sidewalks, bike paths, schools, parks or new facilities of any kind included in the SW-SAZ proposal.

The city has determined that subsidies would be needed to make redevelopment profitable for developers. This means extending the controversial MUPTE 10-year property tax exemption to the area. Such tax waivers make it harder for the city to fund the facilities and services an expanded population requires.

Going forward, the council has made it clear that they favor protecting established residential neighborhoods and want more public engagement in the process.

The city has tried to rationalize the SW-SAZ by linking it to the Envision Eugene comprehensive plan; however, the two have no real legal relationship. The city could proceed with finalizing Envision Eugene0 and address the South Willamette area at a pace that is more conducive to broader public participation.

Many residents of the area have wondered why the standard neighborhood refinement planning process wasn't used for the area, instead of the zoning amendment process. This continues to sound like the most reasonable approach for planning this complex, diverse and vital area. If the city wants to salvage the SW-SAZ, the best approach may be to scale the boundaries back to include just the commercial areas along Willamette Street.

Find a complete copy of the 24-page South Willamette Rezoning Impact Study, and other information about the SW-SAZ, on the South Willamette Neighbors website, swneugene.org.

CORRECTIONS/ CLARIFICATIONS

• In our Oct. 29 news story on South Willamette zoning we wrote that the online petition had 210 signatures as of Oct. 26. South Willamette Neighbors tell us that 500-plus paper petitions have also been gathered.

• In our Oct. 29 review of Actors Cabaret of Eugene's The Rocky Horror Picture Show, we misidentified the cast. To be clear, Anthony Krall played Dr. Frank N. Furter, Cody Mendonca played Riff Raff, Joel Ibanez played Brad and Jenny Parks played Janet. Contrary to some titillating rumors swirling about, this is not a reprinted review from a decade ago. We pride ourselves on working with student writers — Isabel Zacharias sends her apologies to ACE — and we have all learned a lesson from this: The internet is an unreliable source.

40 MINUTES WITH THE UO'S PRESIDENT SCHILL

It's halfway through fall term and Michael Schill has been UO president since July 1. He's five months into his term as the fifth president (counting interim leaders, too) in five years, something that has led the Chronicle of Higher Education to call the Ducks' leadership position a "revolving door."

Schill met with members of EW's editorial board Oct. 30 to talk about some of the UO's current occupations.

Eugene, like many college cities, has a "town and gown" split. Schill says the UO seeks to be a good neighbor, and he points to his efforts, back when school started, knocking on doors in areas around campus with Mayor Kitty Piercy.

Schill says one plan is to develop the UO's role as an "innovation hub" and increase development of the sciences on campus. The president wants to emphasize the importance of the benefits, on a city and state level, of a "flagship university." Schill has a background in real estate law, and he says the skilled workforce the UO provides is "critical for a state to grow and flourish."

This need for a skilled workforce, Schill says, is tied to what he sees as a need to help the state appreciate what the school provides to the state, as well as what more the UO could provide locally and to people in rural areas.

This led EW to ask about the lack of funding for higher education, as well as for K-12 education, and whether the educational systems could team up in lobbying for better state funding. "For us to succeed, we need K-12 to succeed also," Schill says, as there is a pipeline of students from the public K-12 system to the university. "We should be part of the effort to strengthen K-12," he says, adding that he thinks currently K-12 has the stronger lobby.

As a first-generation college student — the son of a clothing factory worker — Schill says that "everyone should get a great education," and the UO teaches students not just book learning but

'Everyone should get a great education,' and the UO teaches students not just book learning but 'how to be leaders in the world.'

LAURIE TRIEGER

"I grew up playing in the woods and creeks," says Laurie Trieger, who lived in Philadelphia with her mom, but attended the Miquon School out in the country, where her mother worked in administration. "It was very '70s, a radical creative education. I learned critical thinking and never had a letter grade." After high school, Trieger waited tables and also volunteered at the Elizabeth Blackwell Health Center for Women, then was hired there full-time. In 1982, she met Larry Coxe in Philly. Two years later, they sold everything and departed. "Let's check out the West Coast," she said, and they wound up in Yachats, where they enjoyed cheap rent and beach walks until daughter Amalia was born in 1986. "We moved to Eugene in '87, and bought a house in Whiteaker within a year. Larry worked at the Red Barn and I got involved with the neighborhood council."

They had a son, Dion, in 1990, and she began volunteering with FOOD for Lane County, located nearby. "Larry began working there when they moved to west Eugene in 1999," she says. "He still does. I worked there till 2007, coordinating countywide gleaning." She helped gleaners (people who collect leftover produce) organize statewide and pass a gleaning tax credit to incentivize growers. Afterwards, she spent five years as executive director of Lane County Healthy Active Youth, focused on reducing childhood obesity. The Neighborhood Economic Development Corporation (NEDCO) recruited her in 2012 to help develop its Sprout! Regional Food Hub in Springfield. She currently works for Family Forward Oregon, advocating for women and working families. "I love it!" she says. "It ties all my work together, working for policies that make the system more fair."

“how to be leaders in the world.”

The UO’s most visible outreach is via its football and athletics programs and, while the Ducks are wildly popular with some, the athletic program is controversial for many who see the school’s academics falling by the wayside. How do we raise up the UO’s academics comparably to the way its athletics has risen?

According to Schill, the UO athletics program creates school spirit and keeps an alumni connection. He says that the athletics program is “self-supporting so it doesn’t drain our resources” and it “gets our name out.” He says the school will be hiring 80 to 100 new faculty members in the next four years and building its sciences, which he says tend to be expensive as faculty need labs.

One controversial issue that has been linked, in some instances, with athletics is the rape allegations and allegations of mishandled sexual assault cases that have been in the news. EW asked Schill how the UO can rebuild trust in the light of those allegations.

Schill points to the climate surveys conducted at the UO and across the nation, saying that while the UO is in the middle of the pack in those results, “that’s not saying it’s acceptable” and “all universities need to take action and have zero tolerance for sexual violence.”

While maintaining that the UO did not do anything illegal when it accessed the counseling records of students who had made rape allegations, Schill also says that the school has moved to protect student privacy in such situations, requiring the UO to “subpoena ourselves” if there is a legal action or notify students whose records it intends to review, giving them an opportunity to object.

According to the Chronicle of Higher Education, Jennifer Morlok, a therapist and whistleblower on the UO’s handling of the records, wrote a resignation letter to Schill on Nov. 1, saying that the university had “taken no supportive actions to make sure I am safe and treated with the full professional support I need in order to do my job.”

Schill says the counseling records issue “seems to be a story people can’t let go of” and expressed a desire to be “forward-looking, and focus on what makes us great.”

Schill’s first all-campus address will be on “The UO’s Commitment to Access and Opportunity” at 11 am Tuesday, Nov. 10, at the EMU Ballroom on campus. — Camilla Mortensen

HARVARD PROFESSOR TO SPEAK AT UO ON BLACK LIVES MATTER

Charles Ogletree has a vision for the Black Lives Matter movement, the youth of our country and even a vision for how to change the conditions of generational poverty featured on HBO’s The Wire. Ogletree, an activist and prominent Harvard law professor, will visit Eugene on Nov. 12 to give speeches on the Black Lives Matter movement.

“I want to make people understand — you can see all the galas and awards I’ve accomplished, but I’m still just a kid from California that had an opportunity to finish college,” he tells EW. “My mission is to make sure the next generation of young people understand they are the leaders and they can make a difference.”

Ogletree has taught at Harvard since 1985, specializing in race

IT’S ABOUT TIME

BY DAVID WAGNER

COW PARSNIP,
HERACLEUM LANATUM

November is the month to drain and roll up the garden hoses. It is important to take timers and other freezing sensitive equipment indoors for the winter. Be prepared to wrap the outside faucets. It wouldn’t hurt to give the plants in the yard one final, gentle feeding of fertilizer.

Bird lovers will be keeping a close eye on their feeders. This time of the year there are impressive flocks of small birds, which have come down from the mountains to feed on grains. They love to congregate in yards that have water and different kinds of feed. Water gets to be very important when temperatures drop below freezing. Investing in a watering bowl that keeps the water thawed would be a great holiday gift to your feathered friends.

Leaves of our broadleaf trees don’t finish falling until late November. The bigleaf maple had a good showing of bright golden orange this year. Alder leaves just turn brown and fall quickly. These fallen leaves will decompose and add their nutrients back into the soil. These recycled nutrients will, in turn, enhance the growth of leaves next spring.

Different plants decompose in different ways. I like the way the Oregon ash leaves break down. By late winter their soft tissues will have disappeared completely but the fine mesh-like skeleton is preserved in minute detail. The stems of big herbs show their circulatory system as they decay. The way a leaf connects to a stem is revealed as an intricate web.

and justice issues. Somewhat of a celebrity, this charismatic attorney-turned-professor has made public appearances on many national media outlets to talk about issues of race, such as the Today Show, Frontline, Meet the Press and Good Morning America.

He is also known for his long-time friendship with President Barack Obama, whom he taught when Obama was in law school at Harvard.

Most of Ogletree's goal while he is in Oregon is to raise publicity and support for the Black Lives Matter movement, a revolution he compares to the non-violent Black Panther movement and the work of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

"I'm aging out of the movement. It reminds me of what I was doing in high school and college and even law school — how important it is to have a different voice to go against the system in many respects," he says.

One of the concerns of the Black Lives Matter movement is the high incarceration rates of black people, and Ogletree's visit to Oregon coincides with a recent push by Obama and the U.S. Department of Justice to release thousands of nonviolent drug offenders from federal prisons to lessen overcrowding and cost. The U.S. Sentencing Commission last year made across-the-board changes to federal drug penalties, significantly lowering the prison time for some drug offenses.

Between Oct. 30 and Nov. 2, the DOJ's Bureau of Prisons freed about 6,000 prisoners. Ogletree has worked at Harvard for years to support legislation like the recent Department of Justice decision.

"Too many people are in jail. Too many black people are in jail," he says. "They need to work, get an education, have a family and not spend their time incarcerated."

Ogletree, who lived in Eugene from 2000 to 2001 as the Wayne Morse Chair of Law and Politics, is also returning to town to celebrate the retirement of Margaret Hallock, the co-director of the Wayne Morse Center at the UO. Hallock says she picked Ogletree because he was such an exceptional teacher during his time as the chair in 2000.

"He is a remarkable person who has a very progressive reform agenda and he is able to facilitate conversations across entire communities," she says. "He had a profound impact on many of us here in the community."

Ogletree speaks at noon Thursday, Nov. 12, at Giustina Ballroom, Ford Alumni Center on campus. The event is free, but participants must pre-register on the Wayne Morse Center website. Livestreaming of the Eugene event will be available at waynemorsecenter.uoregon.edu. — Jeslyn Lemke

Barbara's Soaps is back at Saturday Market and will have its usual booth space at Holiday Market, according to owner Barbara Hascall and confirmed by Kimberley Cullen, Saturday Market's general manager. Complaints about excessive aromas coming from the booth have apparently been resolved, though details about the mediation have not been disclosed. "To create a safe place that is conducive for effective mediation, it is standard procedure at the Center for Dialogue and Resolution to agree to confidentiality at the start of each session," Cullen says. The booth was suspended in late August following the complaints, but a number of Hascall's loyal customers came to her defense. Saturday Market closes for the season Nov. 14 and Holiday Market at the fairgrounds begins Nov. 21-22. Something new for the opening weekend is an "I Spy Elves" game with prizes. See holidaymarket.org for dates, times and applications for new vendors.

Beers Made by Walking is a collaboration between local brewers and the McKenzie River Trust. See a list of ingredients and participating brewers at beersmadebywalking.com.

The nonprofit Village School in Eugene has recently purchased its own building at 2855 Lincoln Street but the K-8 charter school inspired by Waldorf education and founded in 2000 does not have a kitchen to support its healthy lunch program. • Eugene voters gave a marginal nod to the five-year library levy on the ballot this week, but the low voter turnout indicates that either this issue is not real high on the public's priority list, or voters were conflicted and undecided. Normally, library measures in Eugene get a more enthusiastic response, and we remember the community coming together in grand fashion to build our downtown library in 2003, followed by campaigns to fund its ongoing services and branch libraries. The mood has changed a bit over the years, but the library did see a big boost in users during the recession that began in 2008. Unemployed and low-income residents find the library's books, CDs and DVDs, periodicals, research assistance and more than 100 computers to be very useful. It's apparent the citizens of Eugene still value their library services, despite grumbles about how the city taxes development, blunders planning and allocates its resources. The city got a victory this election, but if meaningful reforms do not happen, the next time the city goes begging to voters, the results might be different.

• Portland puts a bird on it; Eugene puts a building on it? It's time to stop thinking of Kesey Square as a "problem" or "troublesome" and time to think of it as a valuable public and cultural space to be preserved and utilized. Eugene doesn't know what it's lost until it's gone, until we've "paved paradise and put up a parking lot." Witness our mourning over Civic Stadium, now burned, and City Hall, now demolished. Dropping a building on Kesey Square won't solve the greater societal problem of the unhoused, and taking away public gathering places won't improve downtown. This is a failure of city planning and programming, yet the transient population is perpetually the scapegoat. It's time to think outside the box. Judging from the social media outcry, people are pissed at the idea of the city considering granting a tax exemption through MUPTe for developers to take over a public plaza. So what should we do to make the square more inviting? We can't figure out why the city hasn't taken Ali Emami up on his repeated offer to open up the brick walls around the square and make the place truly a plaza with places to eat, sit and socialize. "Don't it always seem to go/ That you don't know what you've got 'til it's gone?" Let's save the square while we still can.

• New UO President Michael Schill rapped the knuckles of the Oregon press for focusing on the university's past problems rather than its bright future when EW talked with him Oct. 30. Fair enough, from his perspective, the new guy innocent of past UO mistakes and eager for a shining future. But wait! Some stories such as continuing lawsuits and retaliation charges must be reported by the Oregon press and even national media. And deep-seated grievances against institutional betrayal should be addressed. Schill, the newbie, has the opportunity to deal privately with those grievances while at the same time avoiding protection of this institution so badly served by administrators before him.

• We're willing to wager that Gov. Kate Brown, after she's reelected, will not allow clearcutting of the Elliott State Forest, 93,000 acres in Coos and Douglas counties with high public values including carbon sequestration. The fate of the Elliott was the topic Oct. 30 at the City Club of Eugene. Brown is only one of three members of the Oregon State Land Board, which controls the fate of the Elliott, but she's a lawyer, environmentalist and smart politician highly capable of doing the right thing for the people of this state. Write to her, the secretary of state and state treasurer if you care. Go to goo.gl/AR2SE1 for contact information.

• Construction has begun on a replacement building for Theodore Roosevelt Middle School, and we like Lane County Historical Society Director Bob Hart's suggestion that District 4J drop "Theodore" from the new school name and honor all three prominent Roosevelts, TR, FDR and Eleanor. The two presidents were cousins and Eleanor was a distant relative to FDR. The Roosevelts, contradictions and all, are an important family in U.S. history, and their legacy inspires some teachable opportunities for RMS students.

• Eugene native Forrest Watkins is off on a great adventure, bicycling around the world and documenting how people are responding and adapting to their changing environment. We've run his dispatches from Asia in print and on our website, but he tells us he has only about 400 people following his blog 360bybike.com. "I'm not very good at social media," he tells us. He's a sharp observer, a concise and upbeat writer and a good photographer. Check him out, particularly if you are weary of climate gloom and doom. Watkins is Eugene's own Bill McKibben.

• Boots on the ground in Syria? This is how we escalate wars, with well-intentioned military "advisors." U.S. military interventions in the Mideast have an atrocious track record, with extreme groups such as ISIS filling the power vacuums we create. Syria's complex internal strife is fueled by regional power plays, and we haven't even clearly identified our enemies. Now our very presence will be used to recruit more extremists. Best we not get sucked into another convoluted proxy war.

ONE FLEW OVER KESEY SQUARE

Business owner's plan calls for incubators and public space downtown, not apartments

When Ali Emami steps outside his store on Willamette Street, he can look into the neighboring public plaza and see the statue of Ken Kesey. He says he remembers chatting with sculptor Pete Helzer in 2003 when Helzer was working on the bronze artwork officially known as “The Storyteller.”

Kesey is a part of Eugene’s unique culture, Emami says, and that’s something the city should be building on, not tearing down. When Emami was in high school in Iran, he says, he read Kesey’s books. Now, years later, he owns the two properties that border the iconic square that is a landmark to the famed Northwest author.

Kesey Square, also known as Broadway Plaza, is seen as valuable open space by some and as an eyesore by others. Emami sees it as an area with potential, but unlike another plan recently put forth to build apartments on the square, Emami says he wants to keep the space open and make it more inviting. He has a concept plan calling for opening the brick walls of the square, and building a brewery and kitchen incubator, but he is up against a proposal that has been developing, unknown to him and most of Eugene, to build apartments on the public plaza.

Emami is both a longtime business owner in downtown Eugene and an instructor of finance at the UO, with a doctorate from Oregon State. He owns Northwest Persian Rugs and Imports next to the square with his wife Forouzandeh Emami, as well as Forouz, The Salon, next door. In 2003, he purchased the building that now houses Voodoo Doughnut to the east of the square. According to documents he provided to EW, Emami first put forth to the city that one of the walls to the plaza should be opened in 1995. In 2004, he came back to the city with an even more detailed proposal.

Standing at the counter of his rug store, with UO students periodically dropping by for office hours and to work on class projects, Emami pulls out a sheaf of documents — engineering plans, estimates for the price of glass and more. Emami estimated in 2004 that it was going to cost him $100,000 to open up the walls of the square. But he says the city told him if he went ahead with the project, because the square is public space, the improvements would be revocable and he could not put rain covers on the plaza’s land. That was too much money and risk for a project that could simply be undone, so Emami says he decided to wait.

But this fall, when he got wind of plans to sell Kesey Square to developers who want to replace the public space with apartments, Emami dusted off his old plans and put together a computer model and outlined a more up-to-date concept. He also went to the Eugene City Council Oct. 12 and asked to be included in any future Kesey Square discussions. Emami sent a letter to the City Council and city manager reminding them of the previous attempts to open the walls and asking them to consider him for purchase of the plaza as well, should the city decide to sell.

Oct. 12 is the same day that the Eugene City Council went into executive session to “negotiate real property transactions,” and rumors began to fly fast and furious that the city was pondering selling Kesey Square to developers.

On Nov. 2, the R-G posted a story, calling Kesey Square “troublesome” and detailing a plan by architects Rowell Brokaw, Kazem Oveissi (also a rug merchant) and others to purchase the public square and apply for a Multiple Unit Property Tax Exemption to build apartments and retail space on the land. A MUPTE tax exemption can last up to 10 years. Under Eugene’s MUPTE rules, developers could dedicate 30 percent of the units as workforce housing — housing with rents equal to or less than 30 percent of the area median income, which was $42,000, according to the most recent census.

When the plan was made public, many Eugeneans took to social media to criticize the potential tax break and the takeover of public space. Oveissi, who was traveling, was unable to respond to EW’s request for an interview before deadline. However, in the R-G story, developer consultant Mark Miksis says “the public plaza planned for outside of Eugene’s next City Hall ‘will add more than twice the space that now exists at Kesey Square.’”

City Councilor Betty Taylor tells EW it would “really be a big mistake for the city to sell that property for a building. There is so little [public] space left; I think there should be places for people to spontaneously sit down and talk.”

Eugene’s community development division manager Denny Braud confirmed to EW that a group, including Oveissi and Greg Brokaw, “has expressed interest in the property.” But he says, “No appraisal has been completed. If the City Council decides to move forward with the proposal an appraisal would be completed.”

Braud says that the “City Council hasn’t taken any action to proactively sell the property, but can consider proposals received by the city manager.”

Braud says the city has set up a time to talk to Emami about his proposal, and “if the City Council decides to consider a proposal, it would occur at a public meeting. The timing of the meeting would depend on when a proposal is received and the council agenda.”

Councilor George Brown, who owns downtown business The Kiva, says he is opposed to selling the square to any private entity. “Some people say that it ‘doesn’t work very well,’” he says. But “I would counter that notion and say that, when someone takes responsibility and stages a public event like a movie night, a Shakespeare play, a dance party or a political or social rally, it can work quite well.”

However, Brown says if a council majority, “backed by significant community support, wants to diminish the public realm downtown by selling this property,” then City Manager Jon Ruiz should issue a request for proposals (RFP) so the council can evaluate all potential projects.

Emami’s proposal, which he calls a “sustainable public-private partnership project,” calls for opening up the walls of the buildings he owns at 941 Willamette and 20 E. Broadway, or, he says, creating a more inviting façade, in order to “create a viable environment for cultural, social and commercial activities in the square.”

The concept plan calls for turning one of the buildings into a microbrewery incubator and having “frequent local and regional competitive brewing festivals” in the square. The other building would become a start up kitchen incubator with several small kitchens, allowing food producers a space to launch future restaurants and projects while also calling for food festivals and related events in the square. The drawings show chairs, tables and awnings where brick walls now stand, and the iconic Kesey statue remaining in the space it has stood for more than a decade.

Kesey Square’s tall brick walls have been blamed for making the space uninviting, and at the core of the complaints about the plaza are the “travelers” and unhoused who hang out there. “As a public space it’s too small; a cultural group will occupy it and other groups don’t feel comfortable occupying that space,” says Thomas Pettus-Czar, whose The Barn Light bar is across the street from Kesey Square.

Mayor Kitty Piercy shares Pettus-Czar’s reservations about the current state of the plaza: “I dislike the abuse the square takes in terms of destruction of property, trash and refuse and violence.” However, she says, “I have long been a fan of opening up the walls that make Kesey Square difficult to use and program.” She says she has questions about how Emami’s proposal would pencil out, but “I appreciate the opportunity to have that discussion.”

Emami too finds some of the activities around the square problematic, pointing to a window of his store someone broke with his head, but he says that is a larger societal problem that needs to be solved, and pushing people from one corner of downtown to another won’t fix it.

“If the city wants to start building its culture,” Emami says, “this is the plan to do it.” The square, he says, needs vision and to be made inviting in order to bring people downtown. Kesey is Oregon’s culture, he says — Eugene’s culture. ■

THE Best of Eugene

We all love Best of Eugene, readers and writers alike. We love seeing joyful social media posts when winners open the pages of this issue and see their names in print. We love the crazy photo shoots. We love all the hilarious and inappropriate votes we get to read.

But just like anything that is deeply beloved, Best of Eugene is so much fun to complain about. Here at EW headquarters, we enjoy complaining about the 40 hours of staff time it takes to count all those votes. Readers seem to revel in accusations of a rigged system and fabricated winners. But hey, what's a Eugene event without a conspiracy theory?

Lovely readers, you are more than welcome to count the votes yourselves to assure you that we do, in fact, tally all the votes, even the votes for "your mom." We get thousands of votes every year, but this only represents a small percentage of our readership. There are a whole lot of readers out there who don't vote at all. This brings tears of sadness to our tired, ballot-counting eyes.

This year, we added a few new categories, and we're pleased to see some fresh faces grace these pages. Best of Eugene isn't about us — it's about you. We love you, Eugene, and we hope this issue is everything you dreamed it would be. And if not, just remember that you have the power to change it next year. OK, OK, enough soapboxing. Let's get to the fun!

BEST LOCAL HELLRAISER

1. Lefty Kelleher
2. Kevin Cronin
3. John O'Malley

For the past three years running, Lefty Kelleher was voted second-best hellraiser in EW's reader's poll — and that's fine by him. The Whiteaker icon with the skullcap and wicked left hook prefers his runner-up underdog status, whether that entails getting kicked out of the recent Alice Cooper show at Matt Knight Arena for firing up a smoke in the face of a security guard ("They let people vape inside!"), frequenting strip clubs in search of his "new ex-wife" or standing guard against the forces of gentrification as a board member of the Whiteaker Community Council. This year, however, Kelleher was voted Eugene's No. 1 Hellraiser by a landslide, which makes him chuckle and shrug. "I don't give a fuck," he says, "and I'll back it up. That makes a good hellraiser." He says there are four ingredients to raising hell: a lot of pot, a lot of Jack Daniels, a lot of PBR and a lot of one dollar bills. "I'm never gonna die," Kelleher says. "What doesn't kill you, marries you." As for future acts of dissent, Kelleher plans on giving Eugene's mayor a proper farewell this year. "When Kitty Piercy's out of office, I'm parking my hearse on her lawn."

BEST LOCAL UPROAR

1. Civic Stadium
2. EmX expansion
3. The homeless

From triumphant preservation to devastating destruction, Civic Stadium captured the attention of Eugeneans this year. It's one hell of a story — in a years-long process, private citizens, the city and the school district came together to save Eugene's Depression-era baseball stadium from demolition, only to have its old-growth timbers burn to the ground in a fury of fire a mere handful of months later. Here's to you, Civic Stadium. We miss you and look forward to what happens next.

BEST CLOTHING DESIGNER

1. Vanessa Froehling etsy.com/people/stitchesbyv.
2. Laura Lee Laroux revivallclothing.com.
3. (tie) Allihalla (Allison Ditson) allihalla.com and Marcia Knee

If it wasn't already clear that Vanessa Froehling is a rising talent on the Oregon fashion scene, the secret was out when she showed her Fräulein Couture line at Portland Fashion Week in early October. Portland crowds went wild for what she has to offer: lux, strong, sultry designs with a hint of fantasy. Froehling's creations have a cinematic quality, while still offering wearability. She also specializes in lingerie, accessories and costume. We can't wait to see what she does next.

BEST STANDUP COMEDIAN

1. Beth Pinkerton twitter.com/twostepbeth.
2. George Baltzer twitter.com/thefourthgeorge.
3. Leigh Anne Jasheway accidentalcomic.com.

Hailing from Rochester, New York, Beth Pinkerton has a sound message for Eugene: Stop taking yourself so damn seriously, ahem, hippie mafia, vegans and trustafarians. Besides good-hearted poking at locals, Pinkerton shows a deft touch, balancing laughs with tender stories about coming out as a lesbian in a Catholic family and growing up poor. Her impression of her mother — a cigarette-dragging East Coast sweetheart — is already a classic in our book. Pinkerton came to standup through a comedy class taught by Leigh Anne Jasheway (also a Best of Eugene winner!) at Lane Community College last winter. See Pinkerton perform at the 10th Annual Northwest Women's Comedy Festival 7 pm Friday, Nov. 20, at the Wildish Theater in Springfield.

BEST LOCAL WRITER

1. Bob Welch bobwelch.net.
2. Sally Sheklow tributewebdesign.com/sally/index.html.
3. Alex V. Cipolle twitter.com/artseditoralex.

Bob Welch is nonchalant about his fame as a repeated winner of this category, attributing his reach to the fact that "I used to get my picture in the R-G three times a week and no one else did. When people go to answer that best writer question, they see this image of my 60-year-old face." When pressed, though, he reveals that he thinks his readers enjoy reading about what they love — Oregon — and he likes to write local. "People care deeply about the place they live, and that's what I write about," he says. On Nov. 5 and 6, catch "Bob Welch & Friends" at the Hult Center for poetry, stories, songs and more, all celebrating the lovely state of Oregon.

3. Lovable Dog Rescue P.O. Box 50367. lovabledogrescue.org.

The Silicon Shire, the Ducks, wet weather, hippies. Eugene is known for a lot of things, but one of the things we do best is nonprofits. Want a tax deduction that goes to a good deed? Eugene has one that fits the bill for whatever your good cause happens to be. FOOD for Lane County is a perpetual winner in our best humanitarian nonprofit category. The group says that 25 percent of food that is donated and distributed is fresh produce, and according to its most recent annual report, "Working with 189 partner agencies and distribution sites, FFLC distributed more than 8-million pounds of food in 2013-2014 — the equivalent of more than 17,000 meals a day." That's a lot of hungry people getting much needed nutritious food. St. Vincent de Paul and Womenspace round out the top three with their excellent community services — the most recent tragic murder suicide out near Northwest Expressway is a grim reminder of Womenspace's work to end intimate partner violence.

BRING Recycling nabbed best enviro nonprofit this year, with McKenzie River Trust and Cascadia Wildlands hot on BRING's tail. Maybe what nailed it for BRING was its 11th place finish on Oregon Business Magazine's 2015 list of best nonprofits to work for in Oregon? Or maybe it's because we all love poking through all the piles of recycled stuff that makes us feel good about saving the planet and not being a wasteful consumer while still indulging our inner shopper.

Puppies! Kitties! Bunnies! We want to hug and kiss them all! Another thing Lane County does well, and often loudly, is love its beasties. Greenhill Humane Society scampers in as the top animal nonprofit this year, with S.A.R.A.'s Treasures stalking into second and Lovable Dog Rescue rolling in third.

BEST DRAG QUEEN

1. Karress Ann Slaughter

2. Trai La Trash facebook.com/mstrailatrash.

3. (tie) Diva Simone Slaughter and Angelica DVil

Karress Ann Slaughter, né Cornel Hardiman, has become a cultural and community staple in this town. If you haven't seen Slaughter sashay across a local stage, you are probably one of those scaredy cats who haven't ventured downtown since the empty Taco Time was one of Broadway's main attractions.

Or perhaps you know Hardiman as a friendly face at The Kiva, where he always has a kind word or funny story for his customers. Either way, Slaughter or Hardiman, night or day, Eugene is a better and crazier place thanks to the performing artist and dancer.

In addition to the limelight, Hardiman has also done decades of charity work through The Imperial Sovereign Court of the Emerald Empire, one of Lane County's oldest LGBTQIA nonprofits.

"I hate to make it sound cheesy," Hardiman told EW over the phone — when he only knew that he made the top three, not that he won. "But being nominated is the best thing. People considering me is awesome."

When asked why his drag shtick resonates with audiences after 20-plus years, Hardiman pauses for a moment. "I think it's because I'm always trying to stay modern," he says. "I have a different look than most drag queens. I try my best to look like a woman. I just try to be as pretty as I can be and try to look as real as can be."

Hardiman says he's kept up with his energetic routines and excellent physique by staying mobile, walking and dancing every day, drinking lots of water and taking multivitamins.

And what keeps him returning to the stage after two decades?

"For me, it's just the energy [audiences] give when you're up there," he says. "I love doing it. I love fashion. I love hair. I love all that stuff. It's kind of like a crazy addiction."

You can catch Slaughter performing 10 pm every Friday night for Glamazon, the drag cabaret hosted by The Wayward Lamb (see Best New Business and Best Bar). Expect some new routines inspired by Miss Jackson, if you're nasty.

"Janet [Jackson] just came out with an amazing album," Hardiman says. "I'm just heading towards my old favorites," which could be anything from Michael Jackson to Beyoncé.

3. Sarver Winery 25600 Mayola Ln. 935-2979. sarverwinery.com.

The rolling hills, scenery and bountiful vines of Sweet Cheeks Winery are always a voter favorite. “We have really high quality wines and a fun and casual atmosphere,” says Kaitlyn Anderson, manager at Sweet Cheeks. “It’s a key to our success, definitely.” The atmospheric, sloping landscape doesn’t hurt, either. Anderson says Sweet Cheeks is grateful for the outpouring of votes it gets each year. And speaking of thankfulness, she says, Sweet Cheeks is open Thanksgiving weekend, with live music and the Oregon Wood Fired Pizza food cart.

3. The Vintage 837 Lincoln St. 349-9181. thevintageeugene.com.

Izakaya Meiji swooped in and won best cocktails and best restaurant this year, and for those of us who incessantly think of reasons why “the Japanese whiskey place” is where we need to be on any given evening, that’s no surprise. Meji does amazing things with whiskey and, to the joy of any whiskey lover, makes cocktails that don’t do everything possible to try to cover the taste of the whiskey (or whisky, depending on what you are mixing). And how can you go wrong with a restaurant that has “skewered things” (aka kushiyaki) as a menu option? We have a fondness for the shitake-skewered thing, and the first thing to order (after a whiskey drink) is the delicious goma ae, “blanched organic spinach served cold with sweet and salty black sesame sauce.” Meatatarians, pescatarians and vegetarians alike can find one of Meiji’s hot, almost tapas-like Japanese dishes to suit their taste.

We can think of many late nights in downtown Eugene with friends, winding up at the Horsehead and deciding to take the edge off our night's whiskey gingers with some fried food. We've gorged on jalapeño poppers, deep-fried pickles, fried okra and cheese fries. Our go-to is the nachos: cheesily deeply satisfying, the sheer amount of garlic in the salsa is a sure-fire way to guarantee that creepy dudes won't hit on you while playing pool. Actually, it pretty much guarantees no one except our dogs are going to get within 10 feet of us the rest of the night. Trust us, it's worth it.

What would Eugene be without Red Wagon Creamery? We love this little ice cream shop tucked into the heart of downtown, serving scoops of creamy sweetness that redefine the meaning of ice cream. At Red Wagon, even run-of-the-mill flavors elicit rebranding. Heart of Chocolate melts on the tongue like a milk chocolate bar, and a lick of Oregon Mint Chip evokes the fragrance of fresh mint leaves. Hail to the Bee, with swirls of chocolate and chunks of honeycomb candy, is in a category all its own, and there are still the creatively oddball flavors to talk about: Sweet Corn, Saturday Morning Breakfast Cereal and something that tastes like an Earl Grey tea latte in a cone and is amazing. Keep doing your thing, Red Wagon.

HARSHA WALIA

“CLIMATE CHANGE, INDIGENOUS RESISTANCE, IMMIGRANT RIGHTS IN NORTH AMERICA: SHARED LESSONS FOR US SOCIAL JUSTICE MOVEMENTS”

Harsha Walia is a South Asian activist/attorney, writer, and popular educator. She will be discussing her recent book and the inspiring organizational work of No One Is Illegal (NOII), an extensive community of activists. Harsha delves into the challenging questions that face virtually all of us today; she brilliantly explores strategies to overcome the borders within our movements in order to cultivate fierce, loving, sustainable and empowered communities of resistance.

NOII's work is rooted in human rights, migrant justice, Indigenous solidarity, sustainable futures, anti-racism, feminism, anti-empire building and anti-colonialism.

Ranking in third place last year (which happened to be only its first year in business), Da Nang Vietnamese Eatery has ascended the ranks and scored the number one spot for Best Food Cart. The cart hangs out around Oregon Wine Lab, Ninkasi and Oakshire in the Whit, dishing up Vietnamese delights such as bánh mì sandwiches and vermicelli noodle bowls. Key to the food cart's popularity, according to co-owner Tony Ngo, are fresh, vibrant ingredients. "We use a lot of greens, and it's a relatively healthier option than a lot of other stuff you can get," he says. He and co-owner James Ngo (no relation) opened their cart in 2014, and they've been raking in the business ever since. While opening a restaurant is an eventual goal, Tony Ngo says he's grateful for all the support and patronage the food cart is getting. "We can't give you enough thanks," he says to voters.

Unseated in the 2014 popular vote by Dutch Brothers, the Whiteaker's Wandering Goat came roaring back this year to reclaim its place as Eugene's favorite purveyor of all things coffee. When asked what makes Goat coffee so top-notch, the café's operation manager Don Joe puts it succinctly: "Your roast is only as good as your green." What this means is that the folks at Wandering Goat carefully oversee the whole process, from the growing of the bean to its in-house roasting to talented baristas turning it into a tasty cup of joe or creamy shot of espresso. Wholesale manager Arthur Lawniczak says the Goat specializes in organic, shade-grown coffee, purchasing its beans largely from exclusive micro-lots (small growers) and supporting fair-trade farming, including all-women co-ops in Sumatra and Peru. Head roaster Samm Blaine specializes in medium roasts, which Lawniczak says gives the final product a more complex, full-bodied flavor than either light or dark roasts. And although a cup of Goat is best enjoyed at its eclectic, comfy café in the Whit, you can also find its coffee all over town — sold by the pound in local markets, served at restaurants like Marché Provisions, and infused in Red Wagon Creamery ice cream and espresso stout from Oakshire.

I know why the Tacovore calavera (skull) near 6th and Blair has a smug grin on its face: It's Tuesday evening and there's a line out the door. The place is packed elbow-to-elbow on a school night. The mind-scrambling racket of dozens of conversations happening all at once attests to Tacovore's popularity. Ye gods, Eugene loves its Tacovore. Last year, the young taqueria/cocktail bar took home Best of Eugene's silver medal for local Mexican eateries, but it cinched gold this time around. And there's stiff competition in Tacovore's field; Eugene has more Mexican kitchens than you can count. Though, Tacovore's menu is only Mexican-ish, the food tastes good. Taco prices are steep, but the portions are generous and the animals on the menu are free-range and grass-fed. Tacovore's cocktails [in mason jars for casual Pacific Northwest effect] are pretty stiff, too. But food is only part of Tacovore's appeal. Those drawn here seem equally stoked about being whisked away from the complicated Whiteaker neighborhood to a cleaner, more sheltered place ... like, say, the North Williams neighborhood in Portland. The minds behind Tacovore seem to have borrowed heavily from the playbook of the hugely popular and controversial Portland taco shop ¿Por Que No? Purists may scoff at the idea of a $3.75 taco, but it's hard to argue with the numbers. Tacovore is a smash hit.

You can't swing a dead cat on Blair Boulevard north of 6th Avenue very long without hitting a bar, restaurant or some combination thereof. No matter what you want, Blair's got you covered food-wise, especially now that the city's long-time favorite purveyor of barbecue and comfort cuisine moved into a small house on the corner of Blair and 4th. The grub at Papa's Soul Food Kitchen sticks to your ribs and wraps your mind snugly in a reassuring embrace. Close your eyes and hear the pulled pork gently murmur, "Chin up, slugger. Everything's gonna be OK." Papa's Three-Buck Mac & Cheese has got your back, too. "It can't rain all the time," it chirps, lightly. The need for such friendly consolation starts to feel more and more crucial as the winter battle against seasonal affective disorder wears on and no dosage of vitamin D supplements or time with your friends or light from special lamps can save you. That might be why Papa's Soul Food Kitchen has a lock on Best of Eugene's barbecue and comfort food categories. As an aside, whoever designed their menu should get a Best of Eugene award of his/her very own: The thing is beautiful.

"Our primary goal is to make Chinese medicine accessible by making it affordable," they say. "Affordable health care in a comfy chair." Hours spent counting Best of Eugene ballots lend the impression that most Eugeneans despise children and want them dead, if not trucked to another state. Cooler heads prevailed though, and most of you opted not to have Eugene's youngsters rounded up and "creamated" (sic) "sent to hell"/dropped off at the Silver Dollar strip club or penned in a vast clearing where they won't be a nuisance to you at brunch. Oh dear, it just hit me; perhaps that's exactly what our readers meant when they voted Skinner Butte Park the best place to take the kids. All things considered, I suppose there are worse places to erect a toddler penitentiary. Plenty of peace, quiet and fresh air. The RiverPlay Discovery Village playground will help them stay fit until they're ready

BEST CHINESE

3. Twin Dragon Restaurant 919 River Rd. 688-5481. twin-dragon-restaurant.com.

Tucked in with Metropol Bakery and Off the Waffle on South Willamette Street, Kung Fu Bistro is a wonderful shock to the senses. If you're looking for a Chinese restaurant chain with a panda on it, you've come to the wrong place. Kung Fu serves up authentic Sichuan Chinese cuisine, bursting with flavors new and interesting to the Western palate — spicy, savory and fantastically unique among Eugene restaurants. Cubed tofu with chunks of bell pepper and whole peanuts pair well with chicken prepared in a fish sauce, complete with a glass of jasmine tea and a generous scoop of white rice. Voters agree that this is Chinese food on a whole new level.

Sometimes I miss South Florida where I grew up. Let's face it, deer and feral turkeys in Eugene don't compare to the gators you see in Florida backyards. And for all that Northwest has good coffee, nothing compares to a good café Cubano. I had my first one in years the other day at Membrillo. Sweet, hot and strong, you almost swoon into your tiny little cup. Membrillo's unique dishes, from patatas bravas (fried potatoes, chanterelles, caramelized onion, sunny duck egg, romesco sauce, goat manchego cheese) to delicious custardy flan, brings a taste of Cuba and Latin America with a South Florida feel to Willamette Street and is a welcome addition to Eugene's growing food scene.

Wow. What a difference a year makes. It was last December that the two driving forces behind The Wayward Lamb — Colin Graham and John O'Malley — met for the first time. Since then, they have reenergized the local queer community and created Eugene's only queer-designated bar in town, in spite of a loud minority yelling about how LGBTQIA spaces are no longer relevant. Well, try telling that to all the people we see filling the seats every night of the week and hitting the dance floor at the cozy spot downtown. (And before some men's rights group starts trolling this blurb, let us be clear: People of all sexual and gender identities and preferences are welcome at The Wayward Lamb, including heterosexuals. What's not welcomed is douchebaggery. Just don't be a douchebag. But that's good life advice, anyway.)

The Wayward Lamb, which has only been open since August, is kind of like a hip, classy mullet: business in the front, party in the back. You can munch on Sammitch grub and sip on local libations in the mellow front bar, or grab some inspired cocktails and dance the night away in the backspace, dubbed The Den, outfitted with a legit DJ booth.

The Wayward Lamb team has also done loads of community outreach and killer programming such as Glamazon — an ongoing Friday night drag cabaret (featuring Best Drag Queen winner Karess Ann Slaughter), art shows, Wednesday viewings of American Horror Story and performances by The Kings of Eugene — a new local drag king troupe — on "Thersdays," kicking off Nov. 5. Cheers to safe and festive places.

to move to a pre-release facility. The tots would be free to clang tin cups against the bars of their prison all day long without irking diners out. They'd have the Willamette River at which to stare longingly for hours on end. The view from the peak is nice, too. The trails and paths could use a little maintenance, but that's what prison labor's for. Can we give them part of nearby Skinner City Farm? Otherwise we'll have to feed them. Either way, Skinner Butte Park is the best place to sequester Eugene's youth.

BEST THING ABOUT EUGENE

1. The people
2. The outdoors
3. The lifestyle

Anthropologically speaking, the names of tribes or collections of people — for instance, the Fulani of Africa — often translate loosely into "Greatest People on Earth." In other words, any given grouping of human beings tends to think ridiculously well of itself, and in this sense it's no wonder that EW readers said the best thing about Eugene was "the people." Translation: We're all wacky, eccentric, creative, free-spirited descendants of the Age of Aquarius. Bullshit. The idea that the party-line liberal pageantry of some bygone hippie circus is what defines us is outdated and delusional. What makes the people of Eugene truly unique is a complicated state of being, deriving from the rugged individualism of our rural past as it collides with the intrusive ideals of modern enlightenment. Old-timers in Oregon have a nickname for this condition: Cuddy (as in "Cuddy Rick"). A cuddy is a kind of wonderful libertarian grotesque, a Twin Peaks-ish character hovering proudly between urbane sophistication and rural shit-kicking — hippie rednecks, potheads who hunt elk, Deadheads with gun racks. These are the real people of Eugene, full of glorious, colorful contradictions.

BEST THING ABOUT EW

1. It's free
2. Savage Love
3. Events calendar

WORST THING ABOUT EW

1. Too many pot and adult ads
2. Liberal bias
3. Too thin on content

OK, folks. We're going to give you a little crash course in Newspaper Business 101. First of all, we're a free paper. In fact, voters usually say that's their favorite thing about EW. We have no paywall to access content online, and you can pick up EW at any of the numerous red boxes around town without paying a cent. News flash: Journalists can't live on idealism and social justice alone. We've tried, and it's not exactly viable. So those pot ads that readers love to hate? Those mean that we get to pay our rent, have a meal now and then and have the ink to write stories about the community. This is a community-supported newspaper, and our advertising department would love to see more local businesses take out ads to balance it all out. No ads equals no money, and without funding, EW would produce even less content. Does this knowledge make the ads any less annoying? Probably not. But what kind of newspaper would we be if we didn't rile things up?

BEST LOCAL CLOTHING STORE

1. Kitsch-22 1022 Willamette St. 343-2411. kitsch22.wix.com/kitsch-22.
2. Buffalo Exchange 131 E. 5th Ave. 687-2805. buffaloexchange.com.
3. Folkways 1801 Willamette St. 431-3411.

This category seems to get more competitive every year as new boutiques keep popping up around town. But Kitsch-22 has a cult following, and that's as it should be. Walking into Kitsch-22, in the old McDonald Theatre building on Willamette, is like entering a funhouse — it's weird, wacky, cool and packed to gills with original designs by local designers (who run the shop), vintage and secondhand clothing, costumes and other curiosities. Need artsy spandex leggings? They got 'em. How about a tail to complete your furry lifestyle? (We don't judge, and neither does Kitsch-22.) Check! Ugly sweaters for those holiday parties on the horizon? The ugliest! Or perhaps you're just looking for a really great worn-in pair of jeans. Yep, they've got a wall of those. Not to mention they consistently have the most entertaining storefront displays. Viva la Kitsch!

BEST PET SUPPLIES STORE

1. Mini Pet Mart 2636 Willamette St., 345-3399; 1875 W. 11th Ave., 687-6410; 974 W. 6th Ave., 344-9603. minipetmart.net.
2. Healthy Pet 2777 Friendly St. 343-3411. thehealthypet.com.
3. Wags Dog Emporium 485 Coburg Rd., 338-8801. wagsdog.com.

It's hard to beat the ease of access at Mini Pet Mart. There are six stores in the Eugene-Springfield area alone, and the success of this Oregon chain probably stems from its ubiquity and its huge assortment of brands to choose from. Whether you're shopping for your dog, cat or leopard gecko, you're bound to find something useful in the aisles of Mini Pet Mart. Plus, they allow dogs, which is a perk for any dog lover.

BEST YOGA

3. Mudra Yoga Eugene 199 E. 5th Ave. #33. eugenemudra.com.

Most of the following words and phrases are yoga poses, but three of them are skateboarding tricks. See if you can guess which three terms you won't hear from the yogis at Eugene Yoga, which is apparently your favorite yoga studio: half-cobra, cow face, tortoise, lion, crocodile, downward dog, Bikram triangle, lord of the dance, pigeon, dove, crow, fish, simple feathered peacock, corpse, chair, side plank, switch stance railslide, warrior, locust, easy boat, stalefish grab, complex lotus, half moon, left toe-stand, creep, revolved side-angle, monkey king, spinal bend, crane, chair (did I say chair already?), staff, wrist-grab, reverse caveman and horse face. Now that was fun, wasn't it?

BEST VETERINARIAN

1. Animal Health Associates 2835 Willamette St. 345-1544. aha.vet.
2. Edgewood Animal Clinic 4010 Donald St. 341-6558. edgewoodanimalclinic.com.
3. CatCare, Ltd. 1400 Willamette St. 302-5824. catcarelimited.com.

Animal Health Associates opened up in south Eugene in 1947 and has been serving the area's people and pets ever since. We're guessing AHA wasn't offering acupuncture back in the '40s, but these days, the needles your pet gets poked with aren't just for vaccinations — from dental care to behavioral counseling. Best of Eugene voters love AHA's panoply of services. South Eugeneans must love their veterinarians because Edgewood Animal Clinic on Donald Street was voted into second place, and we love that Edgewood has a fund, Amanda's Angels, to help those in need pay for veterinary care expenses. Third place finisher Cat Care Limited is the go-to place for the feline kind. As its name suggests, it's a kitty-only office catering to Eugene's mini kings of the jungle.

BEST PLACE TO WATCH WILDLIFE

Delta Ponds is a constant delight. OK, so Fern Ridge might charm with its glitzy snowy owl, and Hendricks Park has a whole mountain lion to its credit, but where besides Delta Ponds can you see such a reliable bevy of biodiversity? Sure, you've got your run-of-the-mill ducks, nutrias and Canada geese. That's like the bare minimum of wildlife you'll see on a given day. With multiple visits, you get views of great blue herons, great egrets, muskrats, peregrine falcons, bald eagles, kingfishers, Western pond turtles and cute little green herons that dart around in the water. And the best part is, all you have to do is stand there as this flock of creatures surrounds you, while the hustle and bustle of Valley River Center exists only a few hundred feet away. It's a marvel of habitat restoration, and we're grateful for it.

BEST TEA BAR

The Rabbit Hole Tea Bar is aptly named — it's a tiny nook within walking distance of the UO campus, the kind of place you'd duck inside to escape the cold winter chill. Inside, you'll find co-owners Shuang Han and Crystal Zhao pouring steaming cups of brewed gloriousness. It's not that we don't enjoy a good cup of coffee, which aren't hard to find in Eugene, but there's something about tea that nurtures the soul. And heartwarming, mind-soothing tea is what you'll find at the Rabbit Hole. Traditional Chinese teas complement Western offerings, and if you've never tried bubble tea, go to the Rabbit Hole first — sweet and milky with the soft chewiness of tapioca balls, bubble tea will change your entire concept of what the ancient brewed drink can be. In a good way.

BEST CROWDSOURCED CIDER

WildCraft Cider Works always seems to have something new in the works. Besides gallons of delicious, distinctive cider, that is. This fall, WildCraft encouraged locals to bring in their fallen, unwanted pears and apples and in exchange, the cidery turned the fallen fruits into hard cider. Really just a win-win situation for all involved.

BEST MUSIC AT 10 AM

In these days of podcasts and iPods, sometimes it's just nice to hit "seek" on the radio and see what music pops up. For some reason that seek moment happens for us to be at 10 am, and without fail, the place we stop is KRVM 91.9. Maybe we're showing a gray hair with a love for "adult album alternative" or maybe we like supporting a station that's training high school students to be future DJs, but we love our community radio.

BEST BLOODMOBILE MAKEOVER

Sure, this is Eugene, and old schoolbuses made into hippie RVs are a dime a dozen, but Occupy Medical wins the day with its bloodmobile makeover. Reuse, recycle and save lives. Rain or shine, the folks of Occupy Medical and their shiny red-and-white bus are downtown every Sunday at 8th and Oak giving free medical care to anyone and everyone who needs it. Need a haircut to look good for that job interview? How about basic nutrition or a pair of socks? As the weather turns colder, the all-volunteer crew of OM is there to help.

BEST LIVE MUSIC BOOKING

Word on the street is that music bookers here have fallen into a rut. We hear you, Eugene. How many times can Grateful Dead cover bands headline our biggest venues? Does Con Bro Chill really need to stop in Eugene more than once a year? Looking at lineups from the past five years, it appears we've gotten into some Groundhog Day-esque jam-band-meets-EDM vicious cycle.

It's also hard to shake the feeling that bookers don't think women play music, that the ladies are happy to be sequestered to burlesque to make it on local stages. Must you be white, have a dick and a beard and a grubby T-shirt — and be surrounded by five other white dudes with dicks and beards and grubby T-shirts — to get some stage time in this town?

Well, fuck that. We see the musicians and bands heading up and down the I-5 between Portland and San Fran, and we know what we're missing out on. We will kick and scream about raising the standard until something changes, which is why we want to give a shout-out to all the venues that are taking risks and bringing interesting new music to Eugene: Axe & Fiddle, Sam Bond's, Old Nick's, Wandering Goat, Black Forest, Luckey's, Hi-Fi Music Hall, WOW Hall. Thank you for always looking out for fresh, original talent. Keep up the good work.

BEST THING ABOUT EUGENE:

- "Eugene keeps it real, authentic weirdness, everyone is a grumpy asshole, but only because they actually care"
- "Everyone's a hellraiser"
- "Getting to replace your bike annually"
- "Friendly and small but has it all"
- "It isn't Portland"
- "Cheap weed and sexy women are a tie"
- "Old hippies"
- "That eerie bubble of neo-liberal calm and the illusion that the rest of the world is like this so we never have to actually do any work to change it"
- "Well ... there's enough gravity here to keep me from flying off into the cold vacuum of space, so there's that"

WHAT'S HAPPENING

Good luck finding an even darker place of nothingness than Disemballerina's 2014 release Undertaker, a record that sounds somehow gloomier and more fascinating than what you'd expect from four musicians who call themselves "Disemballerina." Sparse in places, sometimes all you get from Undertaker is the sound of gently plucked strings and labored breathing. Fleshed out in others, the songs freely pick up speed and rage and swell to become furious, galloping storms of acoustic music. Always, though, Disemballerina plays hard to get. The Portland-based quartet, which performs Wednesday at Old Nick's, never delivers all of what you want when it's most wanted. Our ears have been trained by Cyruses, Biebers and Swifts (and those that came before them) to expect easy, thoughtless, instantly gratifying pop music resolutions. So the nagging feeling that Disemballerina is withholding something is off-putting at times. Some remote corner of your brain itches for notes it's not getting, which lends the uncomfortable impression it's all a game where the mouse is you and Disemballerina's the cat.

Disemballerina perform with Llorona [and maybe Entrail] at 9pm Wednesday, Nov. 11, at Old Nick's, 211 Washington St.; Old Nick's wouldn't tell me how much tickets cost; come prepared to pay dearly. — Ben Ricker

Experience a powerful evening of music about the American experience. From the New World, Dvorák's famous Symphony, is equal parts love letter to his Czech homeland and tribute to the spirit of opportunity he found in America. To perform Amériques – which captures the sonic cacophony of 1920s Manhattan, right down to construction noise and police sirens – Eugene Symphony and the University of Oregon Symphony Orchestra team up to present the largest orchestra ever assembled at the Hult Center.

A NEW-WORLD OLD MASTER

The brilliant, challenging outsider art world of Henk Pander comes to Eugene

Henk Pander's Portland studio is how I imagine an Old Masters' pad — be it Vermeer, Rembrandt or Hals — in 17th-century Europe. Strewn about are remnants of still lifes, palettes with fat slabs of oil pigment and enormous canvases, all dwarfed by 20-foot ceilings. With the afternoon sun filtering in through skylights, it's nothing short of glorious.

Here, the Dutch painter, based in the City of Roses, has rigged a horse skeleton and cow skeleton, the latter draped with the skin of a tiger, tied to a latticework hanging from the ceiling. Next to this macabre marionette, a huge canvas sits on an easel featuring a nude woman holding an assault rifle in some apocalyptic landscape.

"Artemis, the goddess of the hunt," says Pander, motioning up to his work in progress, the hanging skeletons painted behind her with skulls rearing. "She murdered the whole living world around her."

Pander, a Dutch painter who relocated to Portland from the Netherlands in 1965, is one of Oregon's most iconic and, historically, controversial artists.

Turning 78 this month, Pander continues to paint every day. He comes to Lane Community College's downtown campus for Lane Arts Council's First Friday ArtTalk Nov. 6 when he will present his work.

His larger-than-life canvases are influenced by the composition and technique of the Dutch masters, while his imagery has more in common with the surreal and nightmarish scenes of Dalí or de Chirico.

He was commissioned to do the official portraits of two Oregon governors: Tom McCall in 1982 and John Kitzhaber in 2009, both who posed in his studio. (Look them up: These are anything but staid political portraits.)

And his work is featured in the collections of Amsterdam's Rijksmuseum, NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, the Portland Art Museum and Eugene's Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art.

He's also famously painted the wreck of the New Carissa freighter near Coos Bay. "The Burning of the New Carissa" is on view at Salem's Hallie Ford Museum through Dec. 20.

In the '60s, Pander shook the Portland art world with imagery that was considered too grotesque and sexually explicit for the tastes of the day.

"I made these incredibly vivid paintings — it caused a huge scandal," Pander recalls. "Nobody wanted anything to do with me."

Thus Pander carved out his own art niche in the world of theater, painting sets and backdrops for the Portland's experimental Storefront Theater and others, before returning to canvas. "The drama of my paintings comes a lot out of that," he says.

To this day, however renowned Pander and his paintings have become, he says he has difficulty finding support for his work.

"Nobody's going to buy that," he says. "They say: 'It's so weird and dark, and it's too big.'"

He continues, "At the same time, I think it's really important to make these kind of paintings."

He's right. That weirdness, that darkness, combined with the skills of an artist who was trained in the methods of the Old Masters, is precisely what makes his work so powerful and important. He combines challenging and contemporary themes with a classical arts education, a rarity in a post-post-modern art world.

Pander grew up in Nazi-occupied Haarlem, the Dutch city where Frans Hals once painted. Looking through Pander's oeuvre, filled with large-format paintings of huge skies, strange landscapes and mammoth aircrafts — it's clear that his Dutch environs and the Nazi occupation forever informed his mind's eye.

"If you look at the traditional Dutch painting and if you have been in Holland, the skies play an enormously important role," he says. He also recalls seeing World War II planes from his home as a little boy. "Right behind our house were searchlights — the Nazi searchlights in some schoolyard, and they'd scan the sky," he says. "I'd see them out of my bedroom and occasionally planes would be caught in them and get flak from coastal guns."

Upon moving to America, his fascination for planes transformed into a passion for technology and space. In the late '80s, Pander joined NASA's Art Team to observe and capture the construction of the Galileo, the spacecraft that went to Jupiter in 1989.

Now, Pander has turned his focus to the Hanford nuclear site along the Columbia River. "It's probably one of the most important buildings in the world," he says. He's currently working on several paintings of the site, which he has photographically documented.

Towards the end of my visit to his studio, Pander says that since he was a young artist in Holland, he was always told that all an artist can do is paint a picture of his time.

"I moved from Holland to the heart of this huge super power in this enormous country, and I thought, I'm just going to paint it," he explains.

"This is what I do, and I know exactly what I'm doing and why I'm doing it, and what everybody thinks? I don't give a shit. It gives me a certain amount of freedom," he says, laughing.

Henk Pander will give a talk and present images of his work for November's First Friday ArtWalk 6 to 7 pm Friday, Nov. 6, followed by a reception, at LCC's downtown campus; FREE.

HAPPY RETURNS

Returning musicians mark November music calendars

Much of Oregon's music is made by immigrants from back East, but a few native Oregonian musicians have reversed the process, going on to glory far from their native Northwest. Case in point: flutist Elizabeth Rowe, the Eugene native and South Eugene grad who now holds down the principal flute position with the Boston Symphony. She returns to her hometown to lead workshops and master classes at the UO, and joins the Oregon Mozart Players for a concert at 7:30 pm Saturday, Nov. 7, at Beall Concert Hall. The chamber orchestra will also play Witold Lutoslawski's charming 1950 Little Suite, based on folk songs and dances from the composer's native Poland, and Beethoven's first symphony.

The next afternoon, Nov. 8, sees another returning visitor — Oregon Bach Festival Music Director Matthew Halls — leading the UO Chamber Choir and University Singers and Symphony in Gabriel Fauré's ever-popular Requiem and one of the most famous motets by J.S. Bach at First United Methodist Church. On Nov. 15 at First United, opera fans can hear music from Mozart's Don Giovanni courtesy of Cascadia Concert Opera.

There's more music by Bach father and son Nov. 15 at United Lutheran Church when the Oregon Bach Collegium plays the Bachs' sonatas. On Nov. 17, the church hosts one of Eugene's coolest new ensembles, the Delgani String Quartet, playing a delicious program that includes the world premiere of a new piece by Oregon composer Terry McQuilkin and quartets by Mendelssohn and Prokofiev.

Back at Beall Hall at 7:30 pm Tuesday, Nov. 10, a free concert of new music by UO student composers ranges from piano solos to large chamber ensemble, wind quintet and more.

Then at 7:30 pm Friday, Nov. 13, Beall hosts a mixed-media performance featuring UO profs Laura Wayte, pianist Nathalie Fortin and saxophonist Idit Shner that also includes an original art installation and gallery exhibition by Eugene artist Lillian Almeida, and moving shadow projections by lighting designer Bob Durnell. The appropriately autumnal program, which involves themes of maturation and mortality, includes one of the 20th century's most beautiful vocal works, Samuel Barber's Knoxville: Summer of 1915.

That same night over at the UO's Aasen-Hull, see the debut of the school's new JazzArts Oregon Combo. And at 6 pm Saturday, Nov. 14, at Beall, rising-star pianist Henry Kramer plays a new work by the UO's own David Crumb, inspired by Chopin's gorgeous Nocturnes, plus a few piano classics. The Oregon Percussion Ensemble plays music by Mozart and one of the greatest living American composers, minimalist pioneer Steve Reich, at Aasen-Hull at 8 pm Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Mark your calendars for 8 pm Thursday, Nov. 12, at the Hult Center: The University Symphony joins the Eugene Symphony in the largest ever assemblage of orchestra musicians on the Silva Hall stage to perform one of the revolutionary works of classical music, Edgard Varèse's 1921 shocker Ameriques. The show also includes another radical (though much prettier) work from the same time, American composer Charles Ives' The Unanswered Question, and Dvořák's ever-popular "New World" Symphony No. 9, which teems with American influences. A free after-party follows over at Hi-Fi Music Hall with bluegrass band Head for the Hills.

The Eugene Symphonic Band introduces its new conductor Rodney Dorsey at 7:30 pm Monday, Nov. 16, at Beall in a program of music by Offenbach, American composers Leonard Bernstein (a suite from his lively operetta Candide), Frank Ticheli, Vincent Persichetti and more.

There's some tasty jazz on tap this month too, including Carl Woideck's Jazz Heritage Project celebrating the centenary of one of jazz's greatest composers, Billy Strayhorn (the genius behind some of the Duke Ellington Orchestra's most beguiling creations such as "Take the A Train"), at 7:30 pm Thursday, Nov. 5, at The Shedd. ■

HIP-HOPPAPALOOZA

The “Rocky and Tyler” tour features A$AP Rocky and Tyler the Creator, but Vince Staples is the rising star to watch.

Staples, who supports two of the biggest names in rap on this tour, says he’s glad to make his “contribution to hip hop” and “do these nice little shows.” But shows like the gig at Matthew Knight Arena are going to be the furthest thing from small. This is a huge hip-hop lineup, especially for Eugene.

Tyler the Creator is the frontman of L.A. collective Odd Future. A$AP Rocky has appeared on The Tonight Show with Jimmy Fallon, the cover of Complex magazine and even starred in the film Dope (2015). But if Staples doesn’t boast “star” caliber yet, you haven’t yet heard his music. He’s just as sharp, if not surpassing his tourmates.

Staples, too, had a role in the movie with A$AP Rocky. “It’s a lot of fun, and I didn’t expect to be that decent at it,” Staples says of his week on the set. “I never wanted to rap when I was younger; I watched more movies than I’ve listened to music.”

The introspective rapper admits he can’t name every song off Illmatic (1994) by Nas, and that makes most traditional rap fans angry. No matter — publications like The A.V. Club listed his debut album, Summertime '06, as one of the year’s best in 2015.

Staples says he’s never cared for the “boy’s club” of the rap community, anyway, and says he prefers to be honest with himself when he writes. His music, he says, is for those who find solace when he speaks out against the negativity of gang culture, and he says he hopes to inspire people to be more honest with their own identity, too.

When Staples comes to Eugene, he jokes he has plans beyond just performing at Matthew Knight Arena. He’d also like a workout with the Oregon basketball team and “win more championships” for the university.

“I’m going to try to get a practice in before the show because I feel like they could use a lot of my help down there,” Staples says. “I’m a locker-room leader. I’m a spark plug coming off the bench; I don’t need to start.”

Vince Staples performs with A$AP Rocky and Tyler the Creator 7:30 pm Thursday, Nov. 12, at Matthew Knight Arena; $35.50-$49.50; $5 UO student discount. — Bryan Kalbrosky

NOSTALGIA BLITZ

In their 15-year career, the five members of Blitzen Trapper have traversed wide musical landscapes, from the layered, progressive rock of small dive bars to the rustic alt country of Appalachia. Even within individual albums, Trapper is known for a range of sound that varies dramatically from song to song.

Take, for instance, their 2008 breakout album, Furr. The title track is a pastoral ballad marked by folk storytelling (a young man abandons homes to join a wolf pack). Harmonica brings “Furr” to a diffused end, only to lead into the loud, drum-backed, piano-accompanied follow-up track, “God and Suicide.”

“It’s not common anymore,” Eric Earley (guitar/harmonica/vocals/keyboard) tells EW. “Thirty, 40 years ago you used to hear acoustic songs, then a piano number, then hard rock. You hear it on Beatles’ records, too; they go from show tunes to hard rock to folk songs.”

Blitzen Trapper’s newest album, All Across This Land (released in October), is marked by big riffs and echoing hooks, making it a solid display of classic rock ‘n’ roll. Earley calls this album, the band’s ninth, a nostalgic record. The lyrics explore the influences of family, hometowns and coming of age, and through such attention to these histories — when we’re all just “stupid, strange and young at heart” — we can find clarity in the present, Earley explains. “There’s nostalgia, but there’s also this idea of trying to figure out who you are by looking at certain aspects of your past.”

Los Angeles singer-songwriter Phoebe Bridgers joins Blitzen Trapper 9 pm Monday, Nov. 9, at Hi-Fi Music Hall; $18 adv., $22 door. 21-plus. — Caitlin Mackenzie

MAINSTREAM BLUES

Jonny Lang made his name as a 16-year-old blues guitar prodigy. Since then, he’s dabbled in rock, blues, gospel and pop — all the while remaining one of the most respected guitar slingers in the business.

Like John Mayer meets Eric Clapton, Lang’s got the voice — and good looks — of a teen pop idol, evidenced in 2013’s pure pop-leaning record Fight for My Soul.

All in all, there ain’t much left for blues purists in Jonny Lang, despite the record kicking off with a boogie-blues riff from track “Blew Up (The House).”

Instead, like a guitar-playing John Legend, Lang seems content following the blueprint of pop-crossover artist Santana more so than blues-gone-mainstream legends John Lee Hooker or Muddy Waters.

Soul track “What You’re Looking For” is slightly Autotune-inflected, vaguely blues-rock tinged pop-soul scorcher that could fit alongside many current radio hits from artists like Rob Thomas.

But there’s plenty left in Lang for fans of virtuosic guitar playing. Just check out the Santana-meets-George Harrison ballad “The Truth.”

Jonny Lang plays with The Runaway Saints 8 pm Sunday, Nov. 8, at McDonald Theatre; $35 adv., $40 door. All ages.

FRESH AIR

Mac Miller’s latest release, GO:OD AM, reminds us we can trust the 23-year-old rapper to rise after a period of adversity. The dark undertones from his last self-released album Faces, focusing on drug addiction, give us a peek into the culture that often comes with money and fame at such a young age. (His song “Ascension” declares, “Dear family, my sanity go down when my cash go up.”)

GO:OD AM is a breathe of fresh air. It’s not preaching sobriety or redemption, just an honest self-reflection paired with upbeat, catchy melodies. He opens the album with “Doors,” admitting, “I’m not sayin’ I’m sober/ I’m just in a better place.”

As it’s his first album released since signing a massive deal with Warner Bros. Records, it’s a pleasant surprise to hear that Miller hasn’t sold his soul to the devil for a poppy hit single just yet.

Miller makes his way to Eugene on Nov. 6, and we can only hope to hear some of the old Mac we love (“Party on Fifth Ave,” “Donald Trump”) along with a new Mac we might learn to love even more.

Rapper Goldlink and alt hip-hop rapper Domo Genesis open for Mac Miller 7 pm Friday, Nov. 6, at McDonald Theatre; $32.50. All ages. — Sydney Zuelke

REVENGE OF THE SLOTHS

"I remember hearing when I was a lot younger that the universe was infinite," says Mike Rummans, bassist from '60s garage rock band The Sloths. "If you kept traveling in space, you'd just go on forever and ever."

Formed in 1965, The Sloths opened for several legendary bands on L.A.'s sunset strip, including The Animals, Love, Pink Floyd and The Doors. The group only recorded one 7-inch single for the song "Making Love." The tune ended up anthologized as a lost classic of the garage-rock era; the original 7-inch record fetching thousands of dollars on eBay.

"Years later I heard this theory that you wouldn't go on forever, you would arc around and come back again," Rummans continues. "You'd end up coming back to where you started — it's kind of like that really," he explains, describing the experience of finding fame so many years after the fact.

"People had been playing it for decades," Rummans says. "The actual 45 had become a rare record that collectors were looking for."

He says nobody in The Sloths had any idea their record had become so valuable, but the renewed interest in the group has led to the release of their first full-length album, Back From The Grave, out now on Lolipop Records.

Rummans says to expect a vintage experience when The Sloths perform live. "You'll hear basic rock 'n' roll," he says, "but it's done with a little more technique."

The Sloths play with Eugene's Snow White and Coyote 10 pm Friday, Nov. 6, at Luckey's; $5. 21-plus. — William Kennedy

Happy 10th Anniversary Grrrlz Rock!

Thank you to all the musicians, teachers, volunteers, parents and students who make music education and performance a priority during this month-long music and arts festival for the young girls and women in this town, especially when they may not be seeing much gender diversity on stages the rest of the year. Come celebrate with headliner, the Canadian-born, California-based rocker Lila Rose, who's touring with new album WE.ANIMALS, 6 pm Friday, Nov. 6, at WOW Hall. Joining Rose at WOW Hall will be Alicia Humphries, Eugene Bhangra, The Ridgeline Uke Experience, Samba Ja, Saffron, Adrian Conor and Troupe Azhaar. Organizer Matrisha Armitage has packed November stages with music by women and music clinics. For the full lineup, visit grrrlzrock.com.

Dave Simonett is sneaking into town sans his bluegrass-rock outfit Trampled by Turtles to perform an acoustic set, touring in support of his solo EP Razor Pony, 9:30 pm Friday, Nov. 6, at Sam Bond's Garage; $14 door, advance tickets available at brownpapertickets.com. Pete Quirk, of indie-folk band The Cave Singers, will also perform a solo set.

Don't miss: Next week at Sam Bond's, rising Portland gospel and soul star Liz Vice performs a special early show 8 to 9:30 pm Thursday, Nov. 12; $7. Vice's sound is a sultry modern take on '60s-era soul, which has racked up accolades from The New York Times, NPR and Willamette Week. For an introduction, listen to "Empty Me Out."

PUBLIC AMENITY NO. 1

South Eugene High School nails season opener Urinetown

A delightfully satirical sendup, 2001's Urinetown: The Musical by Mark Hollmann and Greg Kotis, pokes fun at everyone, from poet Bertolt Brecht and Les Miz, to our legal system, politics and capitalism. Refreshingly irreverent, Urinetown is a musical's musical, and it's given the five-star treatment by the capable team at South Eugene High School (SEHS).

In Urinetown, we're sometime in the future and private toilets have been outlawed. The right to pee (first time for everything: I just wrote "pee" in a review) has been overtaken by corporations, who consistently raise the rates on the one "Public Amenity" in town. (If Aristotle went looking for a dramatic "incentive moment," he need not look much further than an entire populace forced to hold it.)

Pat Avery directs this stellar cast, with choreography by Adam Kelly and musical and vocal direction by Doug Dorfoert and Chris Dobson. Vikki Brabham conducts the show's tiny but fierce band.

The show centers on an apost-apocalyptic romance between Hope Cladwell (Abigail Howell) — the daughter of the evil CEO — and her scrappy Urinetown boyfriend, Bobby Strong (Simon Luedtke).

Howell's voice is clear and resonant, and her character has just the right combination of wide-eyed wonder and feisty fortitude. Luedtke, too, possesses terrific tenor richness and acting chops to match, grounding the production with his confident, yet funny portrayal.

Other standouts include Emelia Reed as Little Sally, Sage Siepert as Caldwell B. Cladwell, Lucy Geller as Pennywise and Kyra Siegel as a very pregnant Little Becky Two Shoes.

The entire ensemble plows through the work with gusto, singing and dancing their hearts out. You get the sense that they're enjoying the opportunity to show just how smart, and aware, kids and teens really are.

(When my 9-year-old asked me how the show was, and I described the basic plot, he said, "That sounds like it could happen.")

Sobering perhaps, but trust me: The show is really funny.

SEHS's stagecraft class constructs sets. Costumes, lights and sound are all designed and executed by students.

But before you dismiss this as merely a show by and for teens, consider that many of your beloved Oregon Ducks are not yet of legal drinking age — they're just "college kids" — yet you'd pay top dollar to watch them play.

So give South Eugene Theater a chance, because despite deep and consistent cuts to arts education, they're consistently churning out some of the finest musical productions in town.

Urinetown continues Nov. 5, 6, 8, 12, 13, 14 at 7 pm (2 pm matinee) in the South Eugene High School Auditorium, 400 E. 19th Ave.; $10-$15. More info at southeugenetheater.org.

HAIL TO THEE, MY OREGON!

Bob Welch & Friends returns to the Hult

Former Register-Guard columnist Bob Welch spins his popular Oregon stories for a live audience, Nov. 5-6.

"I had a great ride for 24 years and I wanted to find a way to say thank you," Welch says.

Enter live theater.

"It's a celebration of our state in stories, songs, images and, of course, s'mores," Welch says.

An Oregon native, Welch is clearly smitten.

"I love that you can start at sea level, and end the day at the summit of the Sisters," Welch says. "Oregonians have a passion for the state's natural beauty. We have that in common. This is our home."

Welch's career encouraged him to explore Oregon's scenic vistas. And retirement has persuaded him to share those stories in a new setting.

"I like to try new things," Welch says. "And to ask myself, 'Could I do this?' Thanks to amazing support staff, people like Judy, we did it."

Welch's director, Judy Wenger, is a 30-year teaching veteran, who's directed countless productions for kids.

"I'd have to say that the big difference in normal directing, and working with Bob, is that it's his material. He's the expert," Wenger says. "In trusting me, he listens to what I have to say — And if he questions what I have to say, I taught middle school. I'm used to questions."

So what can audiences expect?

"This is no travelogue," Welch says. "It's a romp across the state, east to west, that we hope will have people laughing, reflecting and falling in love all over again with this beautiful place."

Cellist-guitarist Dale Bradley, violinist-violist Lisa McWhorter and pianist-cello Peter Norland, along with comedic poet David Perham, join Welch onstage.

The show features photography by Stan Newman, Jason Friesen, Laren and JerriLynn Woolley, Jorma Meriaho and Eric Valentine, as well as a video piece by Ryan Welch.

And, as if it couldn't get any cozier, quilts by Jennifer Rabner, Sally Welch and the Something to Crow About quilt shop will decorate the stage.

Last year's inaugural production played to a sold-out house. This year, they've added a performance.

And yes, there will be free s'mores at intermission.

Catch "Bob Welch & Friends" 7:30 pm Thursday and Friday, Nov. 5-6, at the Hult Center; $27-$35; group discounts (10 or more tickets) are available for $29.75 and $23, respectively. SIPPING THANKS

Regional wines are fine for Thanksgiving

Seems like only a minute ago we were sweating BBs in 104 degrees, high heat in high summer. A minute later, our granddaughter Meagan is donning her Katniss Everdeen Hunger Games costume for Halloween. Then we're suddenly into the feast days, fussing about wines to serve, as Mole would say, "wit' da boid." He means turkey. I'm pretty sure.

Reminder, if needed: There is no "perfect" Thanksgiving wine — unless it's whichever wine you like best. That said, we do have our preferences: Mole and the lovely Molly both like dry gewürztraminers from France's Alsace region. Many are excellent, so I have no comeback. But being the shameless locavore I am, I look first to Oregon and the Northwest.

But let's be clear: There's no sacrifice on quality in insisting on our neighbors' wines; the only sacrifice might be prices because most local producers are small family operations just scraping by, whereas some imports come from countries that subsidize their wine industry. For just one example, several local producers are bottling really good sparkling wines, a very expensive proposition — grow the grapes, harvest, press, etc., then buy a heavy bottle (strong enough to hold liquid under 6 atmospheres of pressure), heavy cork, wire cage, water-resistant label, cap, etc. Depending on the methods used: one, the "Italian" or Charmat or "bulk" process in which the bubbles are produced in the barrels, before bottling, slightly less expensive than, two, the methode Champenoise or "traditional" method in which secondary fermentation occurs in the bottles, just the first step in a labor-intensive process that, after years, yields fine wines with tiny bubbles and, vintners hope, great flavors.

Then sell the wine to distributors, who sell to retailers, who sell to consumers. Everyone (except the last) takes a cut out of the retail price.

So how does Torre Oria Cava Brut Reserve (produced in the traditional method) — admittedly superb wine — retail at about 10 bux, even after the cost (presumably) of a long journey on a ship from Spain to our shores? Local vintners — Capitello, King Estate, J. Albin, Sarver and others — make delicious, high-quality sparkling wines in the traditional method, retailing in the $30 to $45 range, actually bargains, considering the fact that a bottle of "real" French Champagne like great Dom Pérignon wears a $200 ticket. For a single bottle.

You might ask, "A'right, so what's all that gotta do with Thanksgiving?" Lots, 'cause good bubbles can be the single wine you serve through dinner. Guests will be tickled; foods taste just fine. On the other hand, you could try some other matches.

Start with bubbly, sure, to pop the party. Then white wines for early courses, building to the mains. Remember always, if you want peace at the table, avoid arguments about religion, politics and taste in wines; if Uncle Artie wants a monster-big red, give him one (see below).

Now, if "da boid" is your main, we think your bird will like Tyee 2014 Gewürztraminer ($18.50), dry but with round, forward citrus fruit flavors, nicely balanced with acidity that'll stand up to butter basting.

A gentler white, still dry but versatile in matches calls for Brigadoon 2014 Pinot Blanc ($18), really tasty, flavors of ripe autumnal pears dominating, not at all flabby. We like all the wines from this family — the Showns — from philosophy to farming to winemaking.

Uncle Artie's Big Red? Sineann Abondante (any year — ca. $20), one of the best Oregon reds to emerge from the Columbia Valley, a rich, bold blend of five grapes: mind-boggling complexity and long, satisfying finish.

Of course, any good Oregon pinot noir is always a fine Thanksgiving match — or any occasion.

Quick reminder: Almost all Oregon wineries are open for visitors during Thanksgiving weekend (and often the weekend before). Some offer nibbles, access to food carts or encourage picnics. Music or other entertainments are common. Many offer free tasting; some even guide guests to barrel rooms to taste the first wines of this year's vintage, often with opportunities to buy "futures," discounted prices on wines that'll be delivered at scheduled times next year (Note: The 2015 vintage seems, based on early reports, very promising, perhaps one of the "greats").

Touring at this time of year can be a soul-satisfying way of getting out into beautiful countryside and entertaining out-of-town guests. Warning: If you're going to taste, designate a driver; even if you spit, tasting a lot of wines can result in impairment. Also remember that limos and guided tours (with drivers) are available. For a full schedule, use the web — all the wineries have websites. ■

VOTED NUMBER ONE BY EUGENE WEEKLY READERS

HALLOWEENTOWN

The second annual All Hallow's Eugene, put on by the Eugene Film Society and City of Eugene Cultural Services, was a grand slam downtown, which just goes to show what a family-friendly place the heart of the city can be with expansive, well-executed city programming. Hundreds of costume-clad pets, teens, college kids, families and Halloween diehards strut their stuff in the costume parades from the Hult Center, down Willamette and then Broadway, where businesses handed out treats. Highlights include: fat dogs dressed as hotdogs, the interactive shadow puppet show at the Hult, the exuberant Thriller flashmob in Kesey Square and a disturbingly dead-on costume rendition of perhaps the scariest clown of our time — the forever-grinning Twisty from American Horror Story: Freak Show — who seemed to be around every corner. Kudos. You'll be in our nightmares until next year. — Alex V. Cipolle

HELLO! MY NAME IS

Hello, my name is Joelle

I've been baking pastries and desserts for about 30 years. As a young girl, I trained in Belgium for 6 years at a culinary trade school where I graduated with honors. By 1986 I moved to Los Angeles to be with family and worked at the famous "Bailey's Bakery" where I decorated cakes and made tarts. From there I moved to Santa Barbara and continued my baking career.

I have spent a good part of my life traveling around the world but the common thread has always been my baking. Wherever I go, I bake. I am passionate about creating the highest quality baked goods. I'm willing to try new things and I do like to be creative... but my goal is always to produce pastries and baked goods of the highest quality. You will find the pastry case at Cedar Creek Meats & Provisions in Oakridge filled with my creations. There are tarts, filled cupcakes, éclairs, tiramisu, cookies, coffee cakes and biscotti along with special seasonal items that are delicious! When you stop in, you will find desserts that are unique and special and cannot be found anyplace else in Oregon.

In the future, I plan to add specialty Belgium chocolates to the menu at Cedar Creek. I also will be adding vegan and gluten free treats in the near future so stop in when your passing through Oakridge or visiting for recreation. Flee the fog and visit us this winter.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): In 1978, Ben Cohen and Jerry Greenfield began selling their new ice cream out of a refurbished gas station in Burlington, Vermont. Thirty-seven years later, Ben & Jerry's is among the world's best-selling ice cream brands. Its success stems in part from its willingness to keep transforming the way it does business. "My mantra is 'Change is a wonderful thing,'" says the current CEO. As evidence of the company's intention to keep re-evaluating its approach, there's a "Flavor Graveyard" on its website, where it lists flavors it has tried to sell but ultimately abandoned. "Wavy Gravy," "Tennessee Mud," and "Turtle Soup" are among the departed. Now is a favorable time for you to engage in a purge of your own, Aries. What parts of your life don't work any more? What personal changes would be wonderful things?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Before he helped launch Apple Computer in the 1970s, tech pioneer Steve Wozniak ran a dial-a-joke service. Most of the time, people who called got an automated recording, but now and then Wozniak answered himself. That's how he met Alice Robertson, the woman who later became his wife. I'm guessing you will have comparable experiences in the coming weeks, Taurus. Future allies may come into your life in unexpected ways. It's as if mysterious forces will be conspiring to connect you with people you need to know.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Small, nondestructive earthquakes are common. Our planet has an average of 1,400 of them every day. This subtle underground mayhem has been going on steadily for millions of years. According to recent research, it has been responsible for creating 80 percent of the world's gold. I suspect that the next six or seven months will feature a metaphorically analogous process in your life. You will experience deep-seated quivering and grinding that won't bring major disruptions even as it generates the equivalent of gold deposits. Make it your goal to welcome and even thrive on the subterranean friction!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Here's the process I went through to create your horoscope. First I drew up a chart of your astrological aspects. Using my analytical skills, I pondered their meaning. Next, I called on my intuitive powers, asking my unconscious mind to provide symbols that would be useful to you. The response I got from my deeper mind was surprising: It informed me that I should go to a new cafe that had just opened downtown. Ten minutes later, I was there, gazing at a menu packed with exotic treats: Banana Flirty Milk ... Champagne Coconut Mango Slushy Honey Dew Jelly Juice ... Creamy Wild Berry Blitz ... Sweet Dreamy Ginger Snow. I suspect these are metaphors for experiences that are coming your way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The Beatles' song "You Never Give Me Your Money" has this poignant lyric: "Oh, that magic feeling, nowhere to go." I suggest you make it your motto for now. And if you have not yet begun to feel the allure of that sentiment, initiate the necessary shifts to get yourself in the mood. Why? Because it's time to recharge your spiritual battery, and the best way to do that is to immerse yourself in the mystery of having nothing to do and nowhere to go. Put your faith in the pregnant silence, Leo. Let emptiness teach you what you need to know next.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Should a professional singer be criticized for her lack of skill in laying bricks? Is it reasonable to chide a kindergarten teacher for his ineptitude as an airplane pilot? Does it make sense to complain about a cat's inability to bark? Of course not. There are many other unwarranted comparisons that are almost as irrational but not as obviously unfair. Is it right for you to wish your current lover or best friend could have the same je ne sais quoi as a previous lover or best friend? Should you try to manipulate the future so that it's more like the past? Are you justified in demanding that your head and your heart come to identical conclusions? No, no, and no. Allow the differences to be differences. And more than that: Celebrate them!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): In the mid-19th century, an American named Cyrus McCormick patented a breakthrough that had the potential to revolutionize agriculture. It was a mechanical reaper that harvested crops with far more ease and efficiency than hand-held sickles and scythes. But his innovation didn't enter into mainstream use for 20 years. In part that was because many farmers were skeptical of trying a new technology, and feared it would eliminate jobs. I don't foresee you having to wait nearly as long for acceptance of your new wrinkles, Libra. But you may have to be patient.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Is it possible to express a benevolent form of vanity? I say yes. In the coming weeks, your boasts may be quite lyrical and therapeutic. They may even uplift and motivate those who hear them. Acts of self-aggrandizement that would normally cast long shadows might instead produce generous results. That's why I'm giving you a go-ahead to embody the following attitude from Nikki Giovanni's poem "Ego Tripping (there may be a reason why)": "I am so perfect so divine so ethereal so surreal/ I cannot be comprehended except by my permission."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Regard the current tensions and detours as camouflaged gifts from the gods of growth. You're being offered a potent opportunity to counteract the effects of a self-sabotage you committed once upon a time. You're getting an excellent chance to develop the strength of character that can blossom from dealing with soul-bending riddles. In fact, I think you'd be wise to feel a surge of gratitude right now. To do so will empower you to take maximum advantage of the disguised blessings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are slipping into a phase when new teachers are likely to appear. That's excellent news, because the coming weeks will also be a time when you especially need new teachings. Your good fortune doesn't end there. I suspect that you will have an enhanced capacity to learn quickly and deeply. With all these factors conspiring in your favor, Capricorn, I predict that by Jan. 1, you will be smarter, humbler, more flexible and better prepared to get what you want in 2016.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): American author Mark Twain seemed to enjoy his disgust with the novels of Jane Austen, who died 18 years before he was born. "Her books madden me so that I can't conceal my frenzy," he said, even as he confessed that he had perused some of her work multiple times. "Every time I read Pride and Prejudice, he wrote to a friend about Austen's most famous story, "I want to dig her up and beat her over the skull with her own shin-bone." We might ask why he repetitively sought an experience that bothered him. I am posing a similar question to you, Aquarius. According to my analysis, the coming weeks will be an excellent time to renounce, once and for all, your association with anything or anyone you are addicted to disliking.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The Sahara in Northern Africa is the largest hot desert on the planet. It's almost the size of the U.S. Cloud cover is rare, the humidity is low, and the temperature of the sand can easily exceed 170° F. (80° C.). That's why it was so surprising when snow fell there in February 1979 for the first time in memory. This once-in-a-lifetime visitation happened again 33 years later. I'm expecting a similar anomaly in your world, Pisces. Like the desert snow, your version should be mostly interesting and only slightly inconvenient. It may even have an upside. Saharan locals testified that the storm helped the palm trees because it killed off the parasites feeding on them.

SAVAGE LOVE

SEXLESS MARRIAGES: THE LAST WORD
 BY DAN SAVAGE

DEAR READERS: Two weeks ago, I announced I would be taking a nice long break from questions about miserable sexless marriages. [I don't get questions about happily sexless marriages.] I tossed out my standard line of advice to those who've exhausted medical, psychological, and situational fixes ("Do what you need to do to stay married and stay sane"), and I moved on to other relationship problems. Readers impacted by sexless marriages—men and women on "both sides of the bed"—wrote in to share their experiences and insights. I've decided to let them have the last word on the subject.

Since you don't want to give any more advice to readers stuck in sexually unfulfilling marriages they can't or don't want to end, will you allow me to give a little advice from the perspective of the other woman, i.e., the person who makes it possible for them to "stay married and stay sane"? I contacted an old flame when my marriage ended. He was married. His wife refused to have sex with him but also expected him to stay faithful to her. Their kids were still in school. He honestly believed that staying together was the best thing for the kids. I went into it thinking it was going to be a fling, a temporary thing to get me over my husband and back in the game. But the sex was mind-blowingly good. And here's the thing about amazing sex: It bonds people. We fell in love all over again. He told me our affair made his sexless marriage bearable. He was happier and a more patient father, he bickered less with his wife. He made me feel beautiful, desirable, known, and accepted—all feelings that had been lacking in my marriage. But I was in the shadows. Every assignment was a risk. I couldn't introduce him to my friends, my son, or my family. After four years, I couldn't take it anymore. My ego was shredded. So I ended it. I was tired of the fear, lying and hiding, and being secondary. My advice to readers stuck in sexless marriages who cheat to "stay sane": Beware of unintended consequences. You can have an affair with the most discreet, careful partner who accepts your circumstances, who makes no demands, who provides you with both a warm body to fuck and the passion that has drained out of your marriage. You can be careful not to get caught. It might be incredible for a while. But the chances of nothing going wrong and of everyone remaining happy over the long term are vanishingly small. It's a matter of time before someone gets hurt.

Ruby Tuesday

Your advice to people whose partners have checked out of their sex lives is on target. But would you be willing to share a voice from the other side of the bed? Until a year ago, I was always appalled when I would read letters like these. Who would stop having sex?! Who would stay with someone who didn't want to have sex?! Then I got sick. My illness came on slowly, but the first noticeable symptom was my sex drive vanishing. My lady parts were drier than a desert. No amount of lube helped. Sex hurt, and I didn't want it. My journey through the medical system was a battle. Trained medical professionals poo-poo'd me. They told me this is what all perimenopausal women experience and I should just deal with it. I was told to "get started" and then maybe I would enjoy it. I was given lists of supplements to try. Finally, in response to other health problems, my doctor diagnosed me with diabetes. Within weeks of taking medication and changing my diet, my engine started running again. It's not what it was, but I don't feel dead below the belly button anymore. During this time, my husband was supportive. I did my best to make him happy. I'd like to think that if I had continued to suffer a loss of libido for years, I would be brave enough to give him permission to find satisfaction elsewhere, but it would break my heart. My points, briefly: Legitimate things happen to people that make them lose their sex drive. Medical support for people brave enough to say "I've lost my mojo and need help to get it back" is not always there, and the solutions aren't always easy or fast. Too often, people (especially women) are told that losing their sex drive is normal and they should just get used to it. No one should be forced to accept a sexless relationship if that's not what they want. And if you've lost interest in sex and don't really care to get it back, you don't have the right to impose celibacy on another person. But in a long relationship, each partner is going to face challenges—and one of those challenges might be helping your partner fight to regain their libido.

Bed Death Survivor

I'm the "other man" to a woman whose husband won't fuck her. The guy must be gay or asexual, because his wife is beautiful, smart, and great in bed. I've never wanted marriage or kids, so this arrangement works well for me. The only time it got awkward was when my girlfriend—this other guy's wife—broached the subject of monogamy. Asking for a monogamous commitment when you're married to someone else? Seemed nuts. But I hadn't slept with anyone else for three years, or even wanted to, so I was already monogamous in practice.

Monogamous In Theory Now Too

If my ex-husband wrote to you, he'd say I didn't want to have sex with him anymore and he was going crazy. The truth is, I wanted to have sex—but I didn't want it to be in one of the same three positions we'd been doing it for seven years. I was bored and asked for some variety, and he refused to do it. My boredom turned into frustration, and frustration turned into anger. At a certain point, the idea of having sex with him made me want to beat the living shit out of something. Was I supposed to continue satisfying him when my needs weren't being met? Our mistake was waiting until I hit the angry point to get into therapy. We should have gone when I was bored. He wound up having an affair and blamed me because I didn't want to have sex with him. But there was a good reason why I didn't want to have sex with him. Maybe before you advise people in "sexless" marriages to have affairs, you could tell them to do some self-examination first?

Husband's Always Right

You wrote that you're sick of telling people trapped in sexless marriages to do what they need to do "to stay married and stay sane." I want to thank you for all that repetition. I needed it. But leaving my sexless marriage was what I needed to do to stay sane. My husband of 10 years berated me publicly, telling anyone who would listen that I was a whore. Had I not had your corpus of work on the matter of marital partners who have zero interest in sex but still demand enthusiastic monogamy, the journey through this would have been longer. Four years later, I still get excited that I actually get to have sex—awesome, giving, experimental, fun sex.
